Speech Tour Of 18 States Is Planned By Willkie

Candidate to Make 7 Major Addresses, 20 Informal Talks In Western Swing

Roosevelt to Travel

Willkie's Plans

By William B. Ardery
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 22.—Wendell L. Willkie decided tonight to make a 3,800-mile campaign tour through 18 States of the Middle and Far West.

After a conference with Chairman Joseph W. Martin, of the Republican National Committee, the Presidential nominee announced that he would leave his temporary headquarters in Rushville, Ind., September 14 and go by special train to Coffeyville, Kans., where he will open his campaign formally two days later.

Willkie said he probably would make seven major addresses and between 20 and 25 informal talks. Besides Coffeyville, the main speeches are expected to be at Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Oreg., Seattle, Wash., and an undesignated town in Iowa.

Winding Up In Detroit

The nominee will make his final address of that trip at Detroit September 30 before the National Federation of Republican Women's Clubs.

A schedule of dates for the talks will be arranged tomorrow at another conference between Willkie and Martin.

Willkie discussed possible methods of capturing Southern Democratic votes in a conference last night with John W. Hanes, former Undersecretary of the Treasury in the Roosevelt Administration; Lewis Douglas, Mr. Roosevelt's first Budget Director, and Alan Valentine, a Democrat and president of Rochester University.

Legal Factors Discussed

The four said they had talked over the legal factors involved in putting up a new ticket, such as "The National Unity Democrats," in some Southern States. Willkie emphasized that "the question of practicability" of offering such a ticket had been considered along with the legal phases.

A major legal question involved is whether votes cast for electors of another party could be counted cumulatively with Republican votes for Willkie.

Willkie and his associates said they believed they had a good chance of carrying Texas, Florida, Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. Douglas added:

"That doesn't mean we won't make a very aggressive effort in other Southern States."

American Legion's Course Defended By Roosevelt

The reason this Government refused to change the course of the Army transport American Legion despite a German warning was related by President Roosevelt yesterday to Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington.

Stephen Early, the President's press secretary, described the situation to reporters as a case of one nation having said certain waters were mined and another having said certain other waters were mined.

Asked by newsmen whether the President's explanation had satisfied him, Bone declared:

"My only interest was to keep the ship from being blown up. God knows what might happen if it were sunk. I don't know anything about the minefields against which different countries warned."

The Gallup Poll

New Jersey Still Willkie's; Margin Shrinks

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 22.—A State-wide survey of political sentiment throughout New Jersey finds the State leaning to Wendell Willkie by a small margin, but shows a slight drop in Willkie's popularity since early August.

The study was conducted by the American Institute as part of its second Nation-wide poll in the Roosevelt-Willkie campaign. New Jersey is the first State in which the tabulations have been completed. Final returns for the Nation in the new poll will be released August 25 and will show the lineup of each of the 48 States and the division of total electoral votes for the two candidates if election were being held today.

New Jersey's 16 electoral votes make it a rich prize in any election. Although the State voted for Roosevelt in 1932 and went for him by the landslide figure of 60 per cent of the major party vote

Suspect Admits Mailing Bomb That Injured 2

Explosive Addressed To Woman With Whom He Had 'a Quarrel'

A 28-year-old colored man last night confessed to preparing and mailing the crude bomb which exploded Wednesday, injuring two Postal employes at the U street Postoffice branch.

The man was arrested late the same day after he had been traced through a woman, living in the 1500 block of S street northwest, to whom the bomb was addressed. Postal inspectors revealed.

Postal inspectors and police arrested the man at United States Soldiers' Home, where he is employed. They then subjected him to an intensive grilling but met only steadfast denials until the suspect broke down late yesterday.

The man then told officers he had made the bomb and mailed it to Lillian Grymes, 1508 S street northwest, in retaliation after a "quarrel." The nature of the disagreement was not disclosed.

Arraignment Today

Postal authorities said the man would be arraigned today before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. He will be charged with "mailing an infernal machine."

From details of the man's confession, detectives concluded the crime was a "one-man job." No further arrests are anticipated, they said.

Aiding postal inspectors in the investigation were several out-of-town bomb experts and Metropolitan Police detectives, headed by Lieut. John Fowler, chief of the robbery squad and noted ballistics expert.

The bomb exploded on the rear platform of the U street branch postoffice as two employes lifted a sack of mail from a truck. The employes, Hyman Ritzenberg, 32, of 223 O street northwest, and Harry B. Hess, Falls Church, Va., were cut by flying fragments.

The bomb, which was of the "contact" type, exploded prematurely because it was covered only by paper.

U.S. Suit Asks 'Reasonable' Arms Profits

Copyright by New York Times

In an announced effort to discover the rights of the Government to require industries to fill defense contracts on "reasonable terms," the Justice Department said yesterday that it had moved to bring before the United States Supreme Court a plea based on two World War defense material contracts in which it is hoped that this issue will be decided.

In a petition for a high court hearing, Francis Biddle, solicitor general, said that the question raised is "of immediate national concern" because of the Government's present defense program.

Biddle asked the court, which will resume sessions in October, to reverse a Circuit Court of Appeals decision in favor of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation supporting shipbuilding contracts which he asserted gave the company "such inordinate profits that a court should not enforce them."

Affirmed by Appeals Court

Of the two suits on which high court review is asked, one was brought in April, 1925, by the United States to recover alleged excessive profits already paid to Bethlehem, while the other was brought by Bethlehem in January, 1926, to recover over $7,500,000 profits not yet paid to it.

The United States District Court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania held that the United States could not recover the profits already paid and that Bethlehem was entitled to $3,270,000 as profits due but not paid. The Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia affirmed this decision.

According to the department's petition, Bethlehem shipbuilding facilities were the largest in the world and its cooperation was indispensable to the prosecution of the World War. For this reason, the Government said, its officials were forced to accept Bethlehem's terms.

Under the contracts, Bethlehem was to be repaid the cost of constructing the vessels, plus a fixed profit of about 10 per cent of the estimated cost, plus a further "bonus for savings" equal to one-half of the amount by which actual cost was less than the estimated cost. The petition charges that Bethlehem submitted inflated estimates of cost, with the result that it would receive over $25,000,000 profit, for doing work which cost about $93,000,000, without running any risk of loss.

"Inordinate Profits"

The Government's petition states that Judge Dickinson, in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, while deciding against the Government, called the transaction a "daylight robbery," and said that Bethlehem's conduct reminded him of Rob Roy "who admitted he was a robber, but proudly proclaimed that he was no thief." The Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia, the petition says, described Bethlehem's attitude as one of "commercial greed" which took "advantage of the Nation's necessities to secure inordinate profits."

Biddle asked the Supreme Court to review the case briefly because "the Government is now engaged

Joint Board Chosen

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night named a six-man group, including Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York, to represent the United States on the Joint Canadian-American Defense Board.

The announcement came four days after the momentous railroad car conference between the President and Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King, where plans were developed for defense cooperation.

The American members of the board, which will consider high problems of strategy in defending the two great English-speaking portions of North America, are:

LaGuardia, who is president of the United States Conference of Mayors.

Lieut. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, commander of the Fourth Corps Area with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga.

Capt. Harry W. Hill, U. S. Navy War Plans Division.

Commander Forrest P. Sherman, U. S. Navy, and Lieut. Col. Joseph T. McNarney, Army Air Corps, who will alternate on the board depending on whether Army or Navy questions are under discussion.

John D. Hickerson, assistant chief of the State Department's European Division, who will act as secretary.

Meeting Set in Ottawa

Prime Minister King at the same time announced the five officials who will represent Canada and the two heads of states called the first meeting of the joint board for Monday, August 26, in Ottawa, the Canadian capital.

The Canadians named were O. M. Biggar, K. C.; Brigadier K. Stuart, D. S. O., M. C., deputy chief of the general staff; Capt. L. W. Murray, R. C. N., deputy chief of the naval staff; Air Commander A. A. L. Cuffe, air staff of the Canadian Air Force, and Hugh L. Kennlyside, counselor of the Canadian department of external affairs, who will act as secretary to the Canadian section.

Japan Recalls 10 Envoys In Americas

Move Is Held Prelude to Diplomatic Offensive by Tokyo

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Aug. 21.—Japan recalled her ambassador to the United States and a small army of diplomatic and consular officials from the Western Hemisphere and elsewhere tonight in what the Domei (Japanese) News Agency described as the prelude to "a diplomatic offensive."

No posts in Axis countries, Great Britain or Russia, were disturbed, but the orders affected virtually all the Americas, key nonbelligerent points in Europe and British Empire outposts. When replacements would be made was not made clear.

The wholesale shakeup was ordered by Yosuke Matsuoka, Oregon-educated, nationalistic foreign minister in the totalitarian government of Prince Fumimaro Konoye.

Matsuoka already has said that he is going to brook no "toadyism" in the diplomacy of the new order in Japan. (Observers noted that the outstanding figures recalled were old-line diplomats with a broad, international outlook, and considered it likely they would be replaced by men of the aggressive.

Ortiz Resigns, Argentine Sees Dictator Threat

President Quits After Senate's Innuendoes At Aides in Land Deal

By the Associated Press

Buenos Aires, Aug. 22.—Stung by a senate investigation of a high-priced land purchase which "implicated without naming me," Argentina's ailing President Roberto M. Ortiz resigned today, precipitating a political crisis in which observers expressed fear of a possible temporary dictatorship in the offing.

But Ortiz's supporters immediately began a campaign for a joint congressional assembly to give him a vote of confidence, thus rejecting his resignation.

A meeting of the senate and chamber of deputies was called for Saturday and a survey showed 123 members out of a possible total of 190 favored rejection of the 54-year-old chief executive's resignation.

Ortiz himself was not mentioned in the committee's findings, but two of his cabinet members, War Minister Gen. Carlos Marquez and Finance Minister Pedro Groppo, were attacked.

Calls Army Chiefs

The war minister called a hasty meeting today with high army officers, apparently deciding to keep firm control of military forces.

When the meeting broke up Marquez issued a communique asking Vice President Ramon Castillo, who has been carrying on general executive powers since Ortiz became bed-

R: A. F. Hits Back at Big Cannon, Fires Flare in Bombs' Wake; De Gaulle Bitterly Assails Petain, Tells of 800 Planes Sent to Nazis

The War Today

SHELL AFTER SHELL BURSTS on England's Channel coast, fired from Nazi gun emplacements in France. British bomber formations swarm across the Dover Straits, aiming their bomb loads at the cannon flashes.

BERLIN SOURCES DECLARE "Germany now has a weapon to control the Channel," but London says the shelling is a "waste of time."

THE NAZI ATTACK ON BRITAIN is bolstered with 800 planes which her former ally, France, has placed at disposal of Hitler, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, French leader in England, declares.

IN THE MEDITERRANEAN theater, troops of Italy are reported in readiness for a new offensive, aimed at smashing British forces in Egypt and seizing the Suez Canal.

JAPAN MAKES WHAT IS DESCRIBED as the prelude to a "diplomatic offensive" as she recalls her Ambassador to the United States and many diplomatic and consular representatives from the Western Hemisphere.

'The Senile Marshal'

Copyright by New York Times

London, Aug. 22.—Exchanges between the Vichy government and "free Frenchmen" took on a sharper tone tonight.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle charged the Vichy government with sending 800 airplanes from the French African empire to be handed over to the enemy, and Paul Baudouin, foreign minister in the Vichy government, in a radio attack described Britain's blockade of France as an "act of hostility" worse than the attack on the French fleet at Oran.

Meanwhile, it was determined that the Germans already have used at least one French plane in their raids on Britain. Experts who examined the wreckage of a machine shot down by British Spitfires Wednesday over northeast England announced that it was of French manufacture.

Pilot a German

The pilot, whose body was riddled by bullets, was a young German. He had crossed the coast alone and engaged in a dive bombing attack when the Spitfires shot him to pieces. The machine had carried six light bombs but thus far other particulars are not disclosed.

Gen. de Gaulle's statement was made in a world broadcast in which he said that "at this very moment 800 planes, the mainstay of African defense, are leaving Morocco, Algiers and Tunis, to be taken to Istres.

In a bitter personal condemnation of Marshal Petain and the members of the French government, Gen. de Gaulle said the "senile marshal" and the "demoralized military leaders" dragged France down with them because they were "anxious that everyone should fall, since they themselves had fallen. They still possessed enough remnants of prestige and a vestige of authority to impose their ignominy upon other people."

"These men, if they formerly served France, are betraying her

White Cliffs Tremble

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 23 (Friday).—This city of nearly 9,000,000 inhabitants, heart of an empire, was raided by German planes in the early morning darkness today—London's first night raid of the war.

For three-quarters of an hour the population—those who preferred watching the fireworks to huddling in air raid shelters—heard the intermittent rumble of exploding bombs, the defensive thundering of antiaircraft guns and watched the weird play of lights and exploding shells against the sky.

Although there was no precise count of casualties so soon after the Germans swept in, it was learned that one or two of those wounded had died.

Fashionable West End Hit

Most of the bombs appeared to have fallen on the western outskirts of the city but there were explosions which seemed to come from London's populous and fashionable West End.

One German plane, caught in the beams of antiaircraft searchlights, was almost immediately ringed with "angry bursts of red flame" from antiaircraft shells.

"Two other planes roared nearby," Henry Jackson, an Associated Press man, said. "The guns flashed a continued roar while the sirens sounded. From every side long white streaks of light traced the sky."

Number Fairly Large

While an actual count was not yet available, observers said the raiders came over London in a "fairly large" number.

The swing back to air attack came after the battle of Britain took a new turn—long-range shelling of England's southeast coast defenses

Little Civil War

Seaboard and Middle West Battle for Defense Factories

The National Defense Commission finds itself today in the no man's land of a little civil war between the industrial Eastern seaboard and the factory-hungry plains States.

An investigation by The Post has revealed details of a bitter contest between businessmen of the seaboard States and businessmen of the midlands for the privilege of playing host to the multi-billion-dollar munitions industry that the United States is going to create.

Every day brings more briefcase-laden spokesmen for small towns and cities throughout the Nation, anxious for a slice of the defense prosperity of tomorrow.

"We Want A Factory"

Every mail pouch and every telegraph wire brings to the Capital their pleas, which are summed up in the phrase, "We want a factory."

Involved are the hopes of little people throughout the Nation that they may get jobs in a new defense factory, the hopes of businessmen that they may make profits if a munitions plant settles in their area.

Real estate values, gross business of stores, farm income, utility profits, all would be affected if Blankville could get a factory.

The stake is large. The Army plans to build 30 to 40 munitions plants somewhere in the midlands, if advisable, costing well above $500,000,000. In addition, private industry using its own money but acting on advice of the Defense Commission will locate new plants that may run into a total cost of $5,000,000,000.

Midwest Is Worried

President Roosevelt in May announced as the Government's policy that new plants would be located between the Alleghanies and the Rockies, for safety in case of attack. This would be the rule, he said, wherever practicable.

Even so the Midwest is worried.

Only three new Government plants have been contracted for so far under the defense program. One Federally owned plant, built for the Hercules Powder Co., is going to Radford, Va., at a cost of $25,000,000. Another $25,000,000 powder plant, built for the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co., is to go up at Charlestown, Ind. A third plant, to make military tanks, is to be built by Chrysler Corporation in the Detroit area.

Oliver Lodge Dies, Promising Message From Next World

Spiritualist Regretted Science's Learning 'Things of the Devil'

By International News Service

London, Aug. 22.—Sir Oliver Lodge, scientist and spiritualist, who believed it possible for the dead to communicate with the living, died today, leaving behind a sealed message which he hoped to convey to friends after his death.

The famous physicist and psychic research worker was 89 when the death he had prepared for overtook him in his Wiltshire home. At his bedside were five daughters and a grandson. His only son lives in Canada.

Sir Oliver followed Lady Conan Doyle, widow of the creator of Sherlock Holmes, in death by only two months. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle died ten years ago with a promise that he would communicate with his widow.

Lady Conan Doyle said he fulfilled that promise in 1936, when she was desperately ill. A "spirit diag-

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

BACK TO REALITY

DIRTY DIG: The most caustic comment I've heard on Willkie's acceptance speech: "He sounded less like a power house and more like a Philadelphia lawyer."

* * * *

Harlan Miller

ABBREVIATION: What seems to stick in my mind from the Willkie epic is his trick of running the words "President of the United States" together so they sound like one word: "Presunistates." Impressive title, at that.

* * * *

RUGGED: No matter how much the politicians worry, the spirit of American enterprise isn't dead. On the highway near New Bedford we passed one sign which said: "Corn picked fresh every hour." At the next farm the sign read: "Corn picked in backyard."

* * * *

WON'T ARGUE: My spies report that opinion of the rocking chair brigade on Cape Cod front porches is unanimous that Roosevelt won't debate with Willkie.

"Why," said one dowager, "that man in the White House is just too busy to argue with anybody!"

"—Willkie and the destroyers"

Even if Mr. Roosevelt won't debate with Mr. Willkie, I'd like to see them meet in a series of poker games. Mr. Willkie's charge that the President is addicted to an "I pass" psychology is a serious one, and should be fought out over a green-covered table, with deuces wild.

* * * *

ROOT'S RANGERS: Just out of curiosity, I have sent away 6 cents in stamps to the lyrical Mr. Oren Root for a Willkie kit, complete with buttons, cards, pamphlet of instructions and a genuine copy of the Willkie pledge.

* * * *

I've got to do something to keep up with my 7-year-old son, who is a member of several secret radio groups ranging from Jack Armstrong's grenadiers to Orphan Annie's inner circle. It's time us grown-ups got something out of listening to the radio.

* * * *

I have this advantage over the b. b., though; he always has to send in tops of cartons or other certificates of merit; all I sent was 6 cents in stamps. . . . There were moments during Mr. Root's radio speech, hard on Mr. Willkie's heels, when I half expected him to ask for two blown-out fuses or other proof of genuine allegiance.

"—the 'Who—me?' psychology"

I PASS: On second thought, after pondering Mr. Willkie's "I pass" accusation: As I run over my poker experiences, it dawns on me that if I had only said "I pass" a great deal oftener, I'd be a better man today; a little richer, and much less inclined to kick myself.

* * * *

UNSOLVED MYSTERY: During my vacation I read "Moby Dick," visited the whaling museum at Nantucket, saw the New York Yacht Club fleet arrive at Provincetown, and listened to Mr. Willkie's masterpiece on a Cape Cod sand dune, with my ear glued to my portable radio.

* * * *

But I still don't know where Mr. Willkie stands on the swap of 50 destroyers for three British battleships or a few naval and air bases around the Caribbean. Mr. Willkie seemed to be playing them close to the chest in his speech. I presume he wouldn't be so reticent in a debate with Mr. Roosevelt.

VACATION CAVIAR: On a beach, human values come clearer. . . . The men and gals who look so streamlined in their street clothes seem a trifle gaunt at the water's edge in swim suits. . . . There's nothing so disappointing as the girls you find on a raft 'way out after a hard swim. . . . Next to the "I pass" attitude Mr. Willkie should look into the "who—me" attitude so popular in the younger set.

Stimson Wants President Empowered To Invoke Wartime Sabotage Laws

Marshall Says Army Has Weapons Enough To Equip Draftees

Secretary of War Stimson asked Congress yesterday to empower the President to invoke wartime anti-sabotage laws in an emergency, as the Congressional controversy over conscription raged through another day.

Highlight of the seemingly endless draft debate was an assertion by Gen. George C. Marshall that the Army has plenty of essential weapons to equip the men scheduled for training under the legislation. Critics in Congress have repeatedly charged the War Department is not prepared to handle the draftees.

The House, meanwhile, took final action on the National Guard mobilization bill, approving the report of a joint conference committee adjusting differences between the Senate and House versions of the bill, and sent the report to the Senate.

It then quickly passed a bill to give the President power to seize for American defense needs machine tools and war supplies on order here for foreign nations.

Enough Rifles for 3,000,000

Questioned by newsmen on the alleged lack of Army equipment, Gen. Marshall, Army chief of staff, said:

"We have enough .30-caliber rifles in reserve for an Army of 3,000,000 men now and plenty of machine guns, artillery, automatic rifles, gas masks and other essential materials for the program."

Later the War Department revealed it has close to 75,000 machine guns, also enough to equip an army of 3,000,000 men.

Secretary Simson submitted a draft of a bill to the House to amend the Sabotage Act of April 20, 1918, to empower the President in an emergency declared by him to put into effect the war-time penalties for sabotage. The emergency legislation would be more narrow than the war powers and would apply only to acts affecting Government orders.

"The War Department is concerned," Stimson wrote Speaker Bankhead, "because of the insufficiency of existing legislation relative to sabotage of plants, utilities and facilities."

Ten Years, $10,000 Fine

Imprisonment for ten years and a fine of $10,000 are provided for violations, under the War Department proposal.

The bill to authorize seizure of materials on order for foreign nations is directed principally at some machine tools, the export of which has been embargoed by the President. Shortage of such equipment has been one of the "bottle-necks" of the defense program.

In the Senate debate, Senator Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming, charged opponents of the draft bill with filibustering, an assertion they immediately denied. Majority Leader Barkley declared he would press for a vote Saturday, but it was considered there was little chance of final action before late next week.

On the House side, a coalition of Democrats and Republicans on the military affairs committee forced a postponement of committee action on the bill until Tuesday. Chairman May hit at the group for "dodging their responsibility" in waiting until the Senate acts.

Reply to Wheeler

Gen. Marshall replied to a charge made by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, Wednesday that Secretary Stimson had suppressed news of growing voluntary enlistments to aid the draft bill. He acknowledged that a page containing a report that recruiting is "progressing at an excellent rate," is "ahead of schedule" and reaches a peace-time peak, was removed from the August issue of the Army Recruiting News, but said that neither he, nor Stimson, nor any ranking Army official knew anything of it until they read Stimson's statement.

Removal of the page was made, he said, at the order of a subordinate officer here, who felt publication of the report conflicted with standing instructions against publishing anything but factual statements in the magazine.

"Incredible" to Marshall

"It is just incredible to me," Marshall added, "the judgment that was displayed there."

The chief of staff also denied reports that the War Department "was planning" to eliminate a large number of National Guard officers and that it had just ordered an unusually severe physical examination to this end. He went on to explain that an act passed last year, granting retirement and pension benefits to Guardsmen, forced the Department to apply the stricter physical standards of the Regular Army to the Guard when ordered into Federal service.

These higher standards will become effective for the first time for Guard officers—except a handful already called for duty in the War Department—when the Guard is mobilized this fall, another Army official stated.

In anticipation of the Guard call, Gen. Marshall said, and as the results of the National Guard Bureau of the War Department, the various States have scheduled "pretty strict physical examinations" to get the matter straightened out as far as possible ahead of time.

Ashurst Denounces Draft

Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, in a brief speech on the floor, denounced the draft as fastening "shackles on the country that will last forever."

"Mark me," he warned the Senate, "at the first opportunity, with lips compressed and with heart firm, Americans will march in a phalanx to the ballot box to repudiate those who fasten these shackles on them."

Senator Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota, declared that conscription would be a "fatal experiment."

"The New Deal has tried many experiments, he stated. "I've voted for most of them. Many have been good, a few have been bad. None before have been fatal."

President Roosevelt will leave Tuesday on an eight-day trip through the East and South which may be climaxed by a Labor Day speech at Chattanooga, Tenn., it was announced yesterday.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, said after a White House visit that the President would deliver a speech the morning of September 2, in dedication of Chickamauga Dam, near Chattanooga. It would be the President's first major speech since he accepted a third-term nomination by radio last month.

A Presidential speech at the Chickamauga site, in the heart of the Government-operated Tennessee Valley power area, would provide an ideal opportunity to debate the question of public power, long the butt of attacks by Wendell L. Willkie before he became a candidate for the Presidency.

The itinerary for the President's week-long junket was announced by the White House as follows:

Leave for Hyde Park, N. Y., Tuesday evening; entrain at Hyde Park for Chattanooga Sunday morning, September 1; arrive Chattanooga Monday morning and dedicate Chickamauga Dam, new TVA unit; leave by train in forenoon, arriving Knoxville, Tenn., in early afternoon and motoring 60 miles to Newfound Gap, in Great Smoky National Park; dedicate park with brief address in afternoon; drive to Maryaville, Tenn., entraining there in early evening for Charleston, W. Va.; arrive Charleston Tuesday forenoon, inspect armor and gun plants; entrain for Washington in forenoon, arrive at White House late Tuesday, September 3.

At luncheon yesterday Mr. Roosevelt discussed the campaign with his running mate, retiring Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace. The President suggested four additional lines to Wallace's acceptance speech to be delivered at Des Moines on August 29, the Secretary revealed.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press

Ambassador William C. Bullitt withheld a reply to his Congressional critics yesterday but informed sources said that he had plans for active participation in President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election which would afford him ample opportunity at a later date.

BULLITT

If plans carry through, these sources said, the Ambassador to France may appear in the role of the chief Administration spokesman on questions of foreign policy.

Bullitt was said to have received numerous invitations to follow up his Philadelphia speech of last Sunday, although it brought sharp condemnation from some Senators as "inflammatory."

Meanwhile, the Washington office of the Veterans of Foreign Wars said that John Cudahy, the Ambassador to Belgium who recently was called home by President Roosevelt, would make a radio address to a V. F. W. convention in Los Angeles at 11 p. m. (E. S. T.) Monday on "The Story of Belgium."

Cudahy and Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Ambassador to Poland, will work closely with Bullitt, it was reported.

With Secretary of State Hull expected to remain largely inactive in the campaign and President Roosevelt too busy, indications were that Bullitt would make the main Administration speeches on international affairs.

A. F. L. Head Asks Help for Britain

Engravers' Union Hears Green Urge Means 'Short of War'

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, last night declared the organization favored "all support of Great Britain short of war" in the present European conflict. He addressed a dinner of the International Photo Engravers' Union attended by nearly 500 persons at the Mayflower Hotel.

Pledging the A. F. of L. to "give to the Government its full measure of support in the national defense program," President Green said the body is opposed to conscription until voluntary enlistment is first tried out by the Government.

"First we should know the manpower needs of the Nation," he said. "We should raise the army in the accepted and American way . . . first call for volunteer enlistment, then if it is imperative to mobilize a large enough army, we should be willing to see conscription enacted."

Stating that the A. F. of L. recognized the need of a "greater Navy," Mr. Green said it favors "development of adequate national defense . . . We are willing that the people of America should work toward the defense of the American continent. But we are opposed to America becoming involved in a foreign conflict and sending troops abroad."

He discussed the rift of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., and stated that a committee of the A. F. of L. "stands ready now to meet anywhere, any place, any time with a committee of the C. I. O. to bring about a settlement. . . .

"Responsibility for the split within the ranks of labor rests squarely on the shoulders of the rival rebel leader who led the revolt."

He declared that "When labor presents a solid front either politically or economically there is no power in America that can ever defeat it united and solid."

Edward J. Volz, president of the union, discussed its growth in a brief speech. Matthew Woll, first vice president of the union, called for the union of all labor and warned that "should Great Britain lose its battle all of us will be in danger of losing our liberties and government."

Volz was reelected president of the union yesterday; Woll first vice president; Frank H. Glenn, second vice president; William C. Golby, third vice president, and Henry F. Schmall, secretary-treasurer. Sessions will continue through Saturday.

'The Competition Is Terrific,' Says Mr. Fowlkes

"I HEAR YOU TALKING," answers Esther Moody, secretary to Sam Fowlkes, supersalesman and president of the International Association of Convention Bureaus. What Sam just finished saying was that "the competition is terrific" in this business of selling cities to conventions. The I. A. C. B. opened their three-day meeting here yesterday

Convention Men Admit Bucking Convention to Get Conventions

Men Who Sell Cities for Meeting Purposes Now in Session in D. C., Declare Wiles And Guile Part of Competitive Game

Selling cities is their business and it's tougher at the moment than trying to work your way through college selling magazines, according to delegates attending a three-day meeting here of the International Association of Convention Bureaus.

"Competition is terrific," admitted Sam Fowlkes, of New Orleans, president of the group, who presided at yesterday's opening session as 25 convention bureau chiefs compared notes as to how they managed to beat fellow members in luring conventions to their cities last year.

It's the Nation's seventh industry, this convention business and the 2,300-odd affairs of the kind held last year represented a commercial value (to the cities lucky enough to have them) of about $150,000,000 in trade.

The convention-seekers were all smiling, friendly competitors yesterday as they were welcomed to town by Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner of the District and Edgar Morris, chairman of the Greater National Capital Committee. A few weeks hence each may be resorting to wiles unknown even to presidential candidates in exchanging friendly stab-in-the-back over a convention that will bring some of that $150,000,000 plum to their home towns.

Once a year these super-salesmen vending their home towns—call a moratorium on throat-cutting to find out: what conventions will make the best pickings this year. How can they be sold on selecting Podunk. How much did this convention spend last year, and what's the best way of getting them to spend more.

They were all pretty free in exchanging information yesterday. Conventions move from city to city anyhow, so there was no harm in revealing the political machinations that one bureau chief used, providing the other fellow will give the inside dope on getting the conventions he had.

Personal contact lands most of the conventions. He traveled more than 75,000 miles last year to bring them to New Orleans, President Fowlkes said. He's been in the business 20 years and is continually learning additional ways and means of clinching the elusive convention.

Professional societies are most desired, members said. The average delegate spends $14 daily, it was estimated. Women's conventions bring the least money to the home-town coffers.

Only speaker on yesterday's program was Charles P. Garvin, secretary of the National Stationers Association, who told the delegates they were lucky to be in a country where conventions may be held. Conventions help to keep a country democratic, he said, because representatives of all sections of the country rub elbows and let the other person know what's being thought hundreds of miles away.

Delegates will continue reading convention reports today at 9:30 a. m. A round-table discussion will follow on "Development of City Attractions." Two speakers are on the afternoon program beginning at 2:30: Rufus Maddux, managing director, New Jersey Tourist Council, and W. Bruce McNamee will discuss "The Story of Travel America Year."

Strickland Gillilan, humorist, will speak at a dinner to be held at the Hotel Raleigh at 7 p. m. tonight. Unfinished business and election of officers will occupy the concluding session on Saturday.

Willkie Plans 18-State Tour Through West

Candidate to Make 7 Major Addresses, 20 Informal Talks

tional meeting in Willkie's behalf, but that there doubtless would be numerous Willkie-for-President meetings among Southern Democrats.

Asked for comment on President Roosevelt's forthcoming eight-day travels, Willkie said, "That sounds like my campaign itinerary."

"Of course, I know all his speeches will be strictly nonpolitical," the nominee added. "My speeches will be political—and they will be announced as such."

Willkie said that his special train would carry him through the following States:

Retort to Flynn

Told at a press conference that Democratic Chairman Edward J. Flynn had asserted that Willkie had no hope of breaking the Democratic South, the Republican nominee replied:

"That is interesting and amusing. Why should he mention it if there is not any hope? It seems to me that Mr. Flynn is worried about Texas."

Willkie said that he would not return to the Far West after this tour, but that he might go back later to some Midwestern State.

These plans, the nominee added, would prevent him from attending the American Legion's national convention at Boston, September 24, or the New York Republican State convention the following day, as previously planned.

Willkie said he had not mapped any tours beyond the one for September, but it generally was assumed that he would campaign actively in the East thereafter and would wind up his drive in New York City.

Samuel F. Pryor, jr., Eastern Republican campaign manager, said that Willkie "wants to meet as many people as possible" and that "we are taking into consideration the wishes of every State."

Pryor mentioned the possibility of talks in Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maine and North Carolina.

Willkie told his press conference he had reached no decision on whether to go into Maine, which elects State officials September 9.

Willkie said his appearance in Coffeyville would be sponsored by "the Willkie home-coming committee" of that city, where he once was a high school history teacher.

He said that he might spend Sunday, September 15, in Kansas City. The trip through Oklahoma, he said, will include a talk at Tulsa the night of September 16.

Although declaring that his plans are not fixed finally, Willkie said he probably would stop in the following towns if his train passed through them in daylight hours:

Amarillo, Tex.; Clovis, Albuquerque and Gallup, N. Mex.; Winslow, Flagstaff and possibly Phoenix, Ariz.; Cadiz, Barstow and San Bernardino, Calif.; Sandpoint, Idaho; Missoula, Butte, Miles City, and Glenville, Mont.; Dickinson, Bismarck, Jamestown, and Fargo, N. Dak.

Willkie lunched today with Gov. Arthur H. James of Pennsylvania, whom he asked to recommend a time and place for a projected major speech in Pennsylvania.

James, an unsuccessful contender for the Republican nomination, had this to say of his chat with Willkie:

"I was happy to report that in Pennsylvania sentiment for him was growing steadily . . . and that his campaign will be followed by the greatest crop of votes that has ever been received in the history of the Keystone State."

Calling Willkie's projected campaign tour "as extensive as has ever been made," Pryor added that "we are taking into consideration the wishes of every State." A final decision on the itinerary, however, was left to the Republican nominee and Martin.

If Willkie should go into Maine, Pryor said, he would take his campaign organization along on a special train in order to get things functioning smoothly for the lengthy trips ahead.

Admit Thefts in N. Y. And Hollywood, State Police Say

By the Associated Press

Elizabethtown, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Two well-dressed men, described by authorities as "smooth talkers," were linked by State police today to a growing list of coast to coast society and Hollywood jewel robberies exceeding $225,000.

Inspector John J. King said Robert J. Beckwith, 34, Boston, admitted during questioning participation in thefts of $900 in jewels from Film Actress Merle Oberon, in Hollywood, and of $25,000 in rings and other valuable in Boston from Actor Leslie Howard five years ago.

Other jewel thefts attributed by the inspector to Beckwith and Charles M. Denneau, 35, New York City, also held in connection with the robberies, occurred in New York and California.

Beckwith, who told police he was a movie extra, is awaiting grand jury action on a first degree grand larceny charge. Denneau, one-time magazine salesman serving a 30-day term for vagrancy, has a similar charge filed against him.

None of the jewels has been recovered.

Holt Blasts U. S. Steel, Stettinius In Draft Debate

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, declared yesterday that the United States Steel Corporation was reaping millions of dollars profits while Edward R. Stettinius, former chairman of the board, held an Administration defense post.

Stettinius is a member of the Defence Commission in charge of raw materials.

"The people pushing for internationalism and aid for Great Britain are feathering their nests out of the United States Treasury," Holt shouted in debate on compulsory military training.

"Ed Stettinius gets $1 a year," he continued, "but at the same time the United States Steel Corporation increased its profits from about $1,000,000 for the first six months of 1939 to more than $13,000,000 for the first half of 1940.

"There are more dollar-a-year men in this Administration now than there are job applicants in the City of Washington. They serve for the patriotism of their country and a few dollars in their pocket on the side."

New Jersey Still Willkie's; Margin Shrinks

State, With 16 Electoral Votes, Is Worthwhile Prize

In 1936, the poll finds the following situation today:

NEW JERSEY VOTERS

	Willkie	Roosevelt
August 4	54%	46%
Today	51	49

Virtually all of the interviewing in today's study in New Jersey was completed before Willkie delivered his acceptance address Saturday; hence the figures do not measure the effect of that speech.

New Jersey was one of the 24 States found in the Willkie column in the Institute's first national poll after the nominating conventions. In that poll, released August 4, Roosevelt led in popular strength throughout the Nation, with 51 per cent of the major party vote to 49 per cent for Willkie, but Willkie was ahead in electoral votes, 304 to 227.

Margin Is Small

That study clearly showed, however, the danger in Willkie's position.

In ten States with a total of 146 electoral votes, including New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Wisconsin, the Republican candidate was found leading by a margin of only 2 per cent or less, which means that a slight shift toward Roosevelt would throw a large number of electoral votes to the President.

The new poll next Sunday will show whether any shift has come, or whether Willkie has improved his position in these ten "borderline" States.

Less Popular in Cities

As is the case in nearly every State, President Roosevelt's chief popular strength in New Jersey is in the cities. Places of over 100,000 population in the State are for him by over 60 per cent. Places of less than 100,000, including rural, are, in the aggregate, against him.

However, as the following table shows, there has been a sharp defection from Roosevelt since the 1936 election.

NEW JERSEY

Major Party Vote for Roosevelt

	1936 Election	Today	Points Loss
Places over 100,000 in New Jersey	74%	62%	—12
Places under 100,000 in New Jersey including rural	55	45	—10

Ortiz Resigns as Argentine President

ridden June 3, to permit him to remain in office long enough to defend himself against committee charges.

The controversy arose over the purchase of land for El Palomar Airdrome at a price of 2,450,303 pesos (about $612,000) which the committee declared was five times its actual worth, and charged the war and finance ministers were negligent. The committee also accused some officials and former officials, including two present and two former members of the chamber of deputies, with embezzlement.

Ortiz declared in his letter that "no one unless he was wicked could so much as insinuate that I have covered or facilitated venality at any time in my lengthy public office."

Protests Innuendo

He continued:

"I protest and do not accept the intention to link me with this false confabulation of interests which I repudiate and condemn, in which the executive branch of the Government has become a target and through which has a result the even balance has been broken which at all times should be maintained between the executive and legislative branches."

Ortiz asserted that although the land purchase was "a matter which arose outside the confines of my government as the investigation showed," the committee by naming members of his cabinet had "soiled my office."

Under the constitution, executive power passes into the hands of Vice President Castillo. But there have been persistent reports indicating other developments might be impending, with perhaps changes in Argentina's representative form of government should Ortiz resign.

Buenos Aires received the day's developments without apparent excitement.

Ortiz's physicians had urged his retirement for some months, since grief over the death of his wife early this year added to the strain of chronic diabetes.

He compromised with his physicians, mandating the powers of his office to the vice president. When the crisis developed he returned to his job last Tuesday, only to resign today.

His administration was credited by his followers with giving the people their first fraud-free elections since the 1920's.

Flying Torpedoes Just Big Bombs, Germans Report

Berlin, Aug. 22 (AP).—Observers here said today that the "aerial torpedoes" which some Brittons report were dropped in England last night probably are large bombs, possibly of 1,000 kilograms (2,205 pounds).

Observers say the 1,000-kilogram bomb resembles a torpedo in many respects. It has fins on the tail and a barrel-shaped fan behind the fins to steady descent.

Some are as much as 10 or 12 feet long. When pitched from planes, they pursue a forward course, squirming and wriggling until the combination of gravity and forward speed causes the air to "take hold" of the fins and force a curved course downward.

Bombs of 1,000 kilograms, carried by huge bombers of all nations, are used only on special missions of heaviest destruction. They will tear out a space in moist ground two stories deep and 60 to 100 yards wide.

'Secret Weapon' Goes Off, Inventor Taken to Hospital

St. Louis, Aug. 22 (AP).—John Exeros, self-taught scientist, was more convinced than ever today of the potency of a "powerful ray gun" he had devised "just for the United States Army and Navy."

The "secret weapon" exploded last night in the inventor's second-floor bedroom laboratory just as he was getting ready to send "a penetrating and destroying ray" into the sky. Exeros, burned seriously, was taken to the city hospital.

Police refused to allow anyone to inspect the gun. "If that machine is what they say it is, no one's going to see it," said Capt. Michael J. Callahan.

FALSE TEETH That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wabbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Strategic Roads, Air Bases Become WPA Project No. 1

Many Highways To Be Opened Up Along Canada Line

WPA announced yesterday that it was going to give "rigid priority" during the coming months to building of a 70,000-mile network of military roads and air bases, many of them strategically placed just below the Canadian border.

Acting Administrator Howard Hunter disclosed plans, worked out on Army recommendations, to lace the country with super-highways similar to the famed German autobahnen that speeded the Nazi onslaughts on Poland and France.

At the same time, he made public construction plans which include money for 10 air bases in small Maine towns that do not have much commercial air traffic. The bases would be conveniently close to major ports and industrial centers in Canada and would be in line with President Roosevelt's new defense agreement with our northern neighbor.

One of the largest air bases on the program is being built in Florida, Hunter said, but its location is a military secret so tightly guarded that WPA officials are not even allowed to mention where the work is going on.

The roads program would include construction of routes paralleling main highways, "access" roads to military reservations, and widening the shoulders of roads already in use.

An improved highway between Washington, Baltimore and New York City may be on the program, officials said.

Hunter said that 600,000 to 700,000 men will soon be working on defense projects. The WPA rolls now number 1,706,000, with an additional million on the waiting list.

Supplementing this work is WPA's industrial training program which uses the facilities of State vocational schools. It is expected to be giving technical training to 60,000 WPA enrollees by October 1, and 60,000 others not on relief.

The airports being built near Canada or in the following Maine towns, Hunter said: Lewiston-Auburn, Augusta, Bangor, Biddeford, Brunswick, Caribous, Houlton, Millinocket, Princeton, Rumford, Sanford, Waterville and Portland.

Some of the work in Maine is improvements to existing airports but six are brand new. The only completely new airports being built now by WPA, Howard said, are in the militarily important Maine area and the secret Florida location.

Rapid expansion of WPA's activities have boosted the five-year total for defense expenditures close to the half-billion dollar mark, Hunter announced.

Jeep Creeper

Farm Tractor Shows Tank Corps How

Minneapolis, Aug. 23 (AP).—"The Jeep," a high-speed adaption of the ordinary farm tractor, may be the answer to one of the U. S. Army's needs for the modern, swift mechanized warfare.

Strenuous tests of "The Jeep" at the recent Camp Ripley war maneuvers, brought wide acclaim from both officers and enlisted men who saw it perform. It rode rough-shod over almost any obstacle, swiftly moving 5-ton howitzers, transported troops quickly in trailers and cleared the way for light and heavy tanks.

Designed and built by the Minneapolis-Moline Implement Co., the tractor possesses quick maneuverability, low center of gravity, a speed of 40-miles-an-hour and a 7,500-pound drawbar pull. These are the things the Army looks for in what is known as a "prime mover."

A 7-ton job, "The Jeep" will carry a 5-ton load up a 40-per cent incline.

In the Camp Ripley tests, the machine rose over rocks, stumps and steep banks, lifted by a roller on the front instead of the old-fashioned "bull-dozer." A heavy protective plate on the underside prevented damage to the engine. It climbed trees with the aid of the roller, pushing down 27-inch growths to clear the way for light tanks.

U.S. Exports Increase by 35% In First 10 Months of War

British and Latin American Purchases Show Marked Gains

War-strengthened American export trade increased 35 per cent in the first ten months of the European conflict, even though German successes closed off markets in much of Europe, Commerce Department figures revealed yesterday.

Shipments to all the world in the period from September, 1939, to June, 1940, totaled $3,273,000,000, compared with $2,431,000,000 in the same months of 1938-39. Imports, too, were vigorous, showing a comparative rise of 19 per cent over the previous period.

British Purchases Rise

Explaining the strong resistance of America's export trade to the shocks of war were unusual demands for materials that go to make weapons of death—aircraft, steel-mill products and metal-working machinery. Shipments of firearms and ammunition showed their first sharp rise in June.

British Empire countries and the United Kingdom itself increased their share of world purchases from the United States. The United Kingdom took 22 per cent of United States exports in June, compared with an average 14 per cent in the same month of 1939 and 1938. British Empire countries bought 45 per cent of our exports to all the world in June this year, compared with 38 per cent in June of the earlier years.

Exports to Latin Amreica jumped sharply and there was a moderate rise, 12 per cent, in sales to the Far East.

Cotton, Tobacco, Suffer

Chief sufferers by the war boom were American exports of cotton, tobacco, foodstuffs and passenger automobiles, all of which declined in the war months.

Sales to continental Europe cascaded wherever Germany took control, but exports before the blitzkrieg were high enough to bring totals of United States sales to the continent 39 per cent above their value in the same months of 1938-1939.

French Air Force Turned on British

today," the leader of the French army in Britain declared. "These soldiers are no longer soldiers, these French are no longer Frenchmen, and these men no longer are men."

By forcing the capitulation of those parts of the French Empire that wished to continue resistance the "so-called government of Vichy," Gen. de Gaulle added, made every effort to satisfy their masters so that "Hitler's eagle and Mussolini's vulture could easily on Casa Blanca, Tunis, Chad, Dakar, Djibouti and Beirut."

Upholds Britain's Cause

Answering Baudoin's statement that the French government would not submit to the British blockade, Gen. de Gaulle called on all Frenchmen to regard Britain as their ally. That ally, he said, daily is becoming stronger and richer. With her assistance and the "irresistible current" that was drawing the New World toward the "rescuing arms of liberty" the strength of France was beginning to revive.

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Aug. 22.—Britain's blockade of Europe was branded tonight by the foreign minister of her former ally as "an inhuman dictatorship of famine."

Paul Baudouin, foreign minister in the government of Marshal Petain, declared in a speech that Winston Churchill had committed "an act of hostility" against France by his statement Tuesday that no food would be permitted to pass the British naval barrier to Nazi-conquered countries.

"The French government will not bow before this decision," said Baudouin. "It must do everything in its power to save this country from hunger."

Sees Continental Solidarity

Baudouin did not say directly what France planned to do but he did assert:

"Whether they wish it or not, whether they understand it or not, the nations of this whole continent are going to be united on a growing solidarity."

Churchill, he added, has taken Britain out of this sphere of "solidarity."

Howard E. Kershner, European director of the American Friends Service Committee, announced later after consultation with French officials that "certain" measures would be taken to increase the aid to French refugees.

Referring to British remarks that the empire's withdrawal from Somaliland before Italian forces was due in part to the defection of the French, Baudouin disclosed for the first time that the French Syrian armies totaled only 60,000 men during the period while France remained in the war.

Had 5,000 in Djibouti

In French Djibouti—nearby British Somaliland—the French had only 5,000 men, he said, adding:

"If the British premier must justify himself for the grave Somaliland reverse, whom can he make believe that 5,000 men in Djibouti could have stopped an enemy?"

As to the French defeat at home, Baudouin declared:

"We were defeated because we did not merit victory."

He accused Churchill of inviting the world to a pitiless battle, predicting "it is only misery that will triumph."

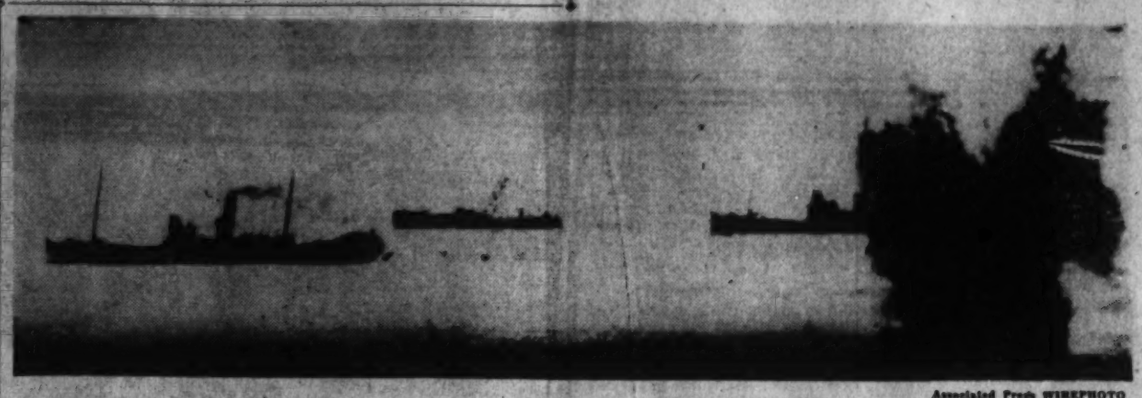
British Convoy Escapes German Shore Batteries



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

NAZI SHELLS FALL SHORT—German guns on the shore of France were spurting death yesterday as mile-long British convoy steamed up the English Channel. Two shells have just fallen near the part of the convoy shown. British censor-approved caption said the ships passed safely through the bombardment. (Photo cabled from London) in two bombardments by Nazi batteries planted along 30 miles of French coast from Calais to Boulogne.

Dover bore the brunt of the shelling, but explosives hurled across the channel splattered other sections of the coast also.

The British struck back with dive bombers aimed at silencing the guns and smashing their carefully prepared emplacements.

The heavy German guns shelled the coast twice. They resumed their bombardment late last night after having been silenced for half an hour by counter-attacking British bombers.

R. A. F. bombers roared over to deliver a second and evenfiercer attack, while Nazi antiaircraft guns barked almost incessantly.

German planes also were over the British coast and some onlookers in the Dover area mistook antiaircraft fire for a counter bombardment by Britain's big coastal guns.

British coastal areas in the region of Kent—county in which the Channel port of Dover is situated—were heavily shelled.

It was estimated that 50 or more big shells screamed across the Channel at the height of the bombardment.

While this long-range shelling grew in intensity, German warplanes were reported in great numbers over Britain—in the southeast, the southwest, the northeast, the northwest and Welsh districts.

12 to 14-Inch Guns

There was no immediate word as to the extent of damage caused by the German shells. Observers said they were being pumped from guns of at least 12 to 14 inches.

There were casualties—none knew just how many. Several buildings were hit, including a church and its vicarage, from which the rector was brought forth on a stretcher.

One shell which wrecked the church smashed through a stained glass window beside an altar. Windows were shattered by the explosion. Pews were splintered and great holes were torn in pillars.

A piece of shell casing 9 inches long was picked up on the steps leading to the pulpit.

As late as midnight some residents were seen carrying bedclothing from homes in the shell-pounded area to shelter overnight elsewhere.

A Close Thing

The occupant of a villa in the shelled area said, "my wife and I were sitting down to dinner—I was just going to carve the joint—when there was a terrific burst of what I thought was antiaircraft fire.

"We soon found out it wasn't antiaircraft fire, for a shell from the German guns had landed about 240 yards away and blown in the windows of the garage."

The German artillery seemed trained particularly on Dover—the Channel port just 22 miles from Nazi bases in France.

Big formations of British bombers loosed their swift counter-assault all along the French coast from Calais, just across from Dover, to Boulogne, aiming their bomb loads at the gun flashes.

A great, red glow was seen to spread low, apparently to the water line, at one point on the French side.

Some Believed Hit

The 30-minute lull between the early night bombardments was taken by some observers to mean that a number of the Nazi gun emplacements had been found by British bombs.

Authoritative persons in London declared that the Nazi attack with land guns was "a waste of time," contending that it had no worthwhile military object.

More damage could be done by bombs, they said, adding that a shell fired from a distance equivalent to the cross-Channel range of 20-odd miles had only 4 per cent of a bomb's bursting power.

Bursts of white light sprang up in the sky over the French coast and streams of tracer shells were seen rising from German antiaircraft batteries.

The shelling from the Nazis' "Big Berthas" was felt at several points at intervals of about three-quarters of an hour.

It was a resumption of heavy shelling which earlier in the day had raked the English Channel from gun emplacements along the French coast on a stretch of 30-odd miles from Calais to Boulogne.

That attack was centered upon a mile-long convoy of vital British shipping in the Channel, and it was officially declared that not a vessel was hit.

The second artillery attack from across the Channel was loosed at about the same time that Nazi bombers returned in force for the first outbreak of large-scale aerial warfare in three days. A total of seven raiders had been reported shot down by tonight, with the loss of two British fighter planes.

A single raiding party estimated at 50 planes crossed the southeast coast in the early dusk and the main body was declared turned back by hot antiaircraft fire. The same coast was crossed in at least two other areas tonight, and at one point dive-bombers loosed incendiary bombs.

Britain clearly was fighting back: All German radio stations went silent tonight—a familiar indication that Royal Air Force fliers are over the Reich.

Late in the day the air ministry announced that in raids last night British bombers had struck heavily at oil refineries, airdromes and rail communications in Germany and German-held territory, beating through intense cold to drop great cargoes of bombs.

Ice formed on the raiding British craft, it was said, and in at least one case a pilot's instruments were frozen. One flier reported the snow had entered the cockpit and formed a 2-inch-thick layer over the side panels of his plane.

The day's first bombardment by "Big Berthas" estimated range of 20 miles and ton upon ton of shells were pumped at the convoy.

At least 100 shells were fired. But so far as observers could see not a ship was scratched; and in a German dive-bomber attack that followed one of the Stukas was shot down.

The Stuka was an important bag, for it brought to a round 1,000 the British figure of the number of German planes destroyed for certain since the intensified air war about the British Isles was loosed June 18.

Seaboard and Midlands Vie for Arms Plants

of their area, told The Post that only seven-tenths of 1 per cent of the contract expenditures approved so far by the Defense Commission will be spent in the plains States. The rest will go to plants on the East and West coasts.

To draw attention to their predicament, businessmen from the area of the Great Plains are holding a meeting in Kansas City, August 31. They invited all the 63 Congressmen from the nine States to attend.

Yesterday the 63 Congressmen, unwilling to lend their prestige too obviously to this bid for local favors, sent out a letter of polite regret. In blunter language, they decided to boycott the meeting, but offered in general language their cooperation—from Washington.

The nine States involved in the meeting are Arkansas, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma and South Dakota. Representative Karl E. Mundt, of South Dakota, is chairman of the "protective" committee of 63 Congressmen organized to decide on how to treat the invitation to go to Kansas City.

The trouble with these States in their efforts to get in on the defense program, it turns out, is that they were left at the post in the race for industrialization that swept this country in the last century.

Now that the Army and Navy and Defense Commission are in a hurry to get equipment and get it fast, the midlands—short on factories but long on ambition—can not hope to get orders until factories are built in this area.

Hope for the Future

Nevertheless, there is hope for the future, a lot of hope, for the representatives of midlands States who are coming to Washington in search of factories and orders.

Col. H. K. Rutherford, of the Army Ordnance Department, director of the planning branch, has a plan to build munitions industries between the Alleghanies and the Rockies, a long-range plan.

Over future years it could mean millions of dollars in the tills of towns and cities of the Central States that now feel the seacoasts are robbing them of orders, of managerial talent and of skilled labor supply.

Five Areas Defined

Col. Rutherford's plan divides the country into five areas, all more than 200 to 250 miles from the country's borders. Inside these areas the Army plans to build its munitions industries of the future, making each of the five areas a self-sufficient unit that could survive and continue to function even if other areas were under attack.

Area A includes northern Indiana, northern Illinois, southern Wisconsin and Minnesota, and Iowa and thence westward.

Area B comprises Ohio, southwestern Pennsylvania, West Virginia, the western portion of Virginia and eastern Kentucky.

Area C includes southern Indiana and Illinois, western Kentucky, Missouri, eastern Kansas and thence westward.

Area D includes western North Carolina, northern Georgia and Alabama and the eastern part of Tennessee.

Area E includes western Tennessee, northern Mississippi, Arkansas, northern Louisiana and Texas, Oklahoma and westward.

Split Bids Allowed

Though this plan is still a thing of paper and cloakroom talk, the Defense Commission has already granted some concessions that are expected to be of help to the Central States.

Under new rulings, manufacturers may now enter split bids; that is, they may bid for a portion of a contract offered by the Government, instead of being required to bid for the entire contract or not bid at all, as heretofore.

Also, manufacturers may now quote prices f. o. b. at the factory door, rather than prices including delivery at the depot specified by the Government, as heretofore.

Both these innovations were designed to help the small manufacturer, especially the manufacturer in the midlands.

India Party Rejects Offer From Britain

Viceroy Is Expected To Approach Gandhi With New Program

By International News Service

Wardha, India, Aug. 22.—The crisis between India and Britain deepened tonight with formal rejection by India's independence leaders of the recent British offer of ultimate dominion status after the war.

The working committee of the All-India Congress Party, after a 5-day session, unanimously adopted a resolution turning down the offer made by the British Viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, August 8 and calling upon all Indians to voice protests.

The people were urged to condemn Britain's attitude which, the resolution charged, runs cantrary not only to India's interests but also to the preservation of democracy which the British hae proclaimed as their major war aim.

Thus, the dispute between Britain and India reached a deadlock of possibly far-reaching effects on the British prosecution of the European war. It means that millions of members and followers of the Congress Party will decline to lend any voluntary assistance, material or moral, to the British cause.

Informed circles expected the viceroy to make a new approach to the Congress Party or to its out standing leader, Mohandas K. Gandhi.

in a program of military and naval armament comparable to or greater than that undertaken in 1917 and 1918.

"It is, therefore," the petition continued, "of immediate national concern that there should be an authoritative determination of the extent to which the country's need should place it at the mercy of its contractors."

In explaining the present importance of the case the Government suggested that the present situation was like that in the World War, and declared that "in times of national emergency the men charged with preparing the Nation's defenses have no time for haggling with a contractor who refuses to perform his indispensable functions unless he be assured an exorbitant profit."

The Government, the petition says, "cannot agree that the law sanctions, as obtained in good conscience, profits amounting to more than 17 per cent of the cost of constructing the vessels under the contracts, when those profits were secured without the slightest risk of loss" and "were coerced by the threat of withholding an essential service from the Government in wartime."

Ringside Table

STRUMMING OVER EUROPE. When Dannie Danford (Neptune Room's top minstrel) looked out of his Berlin hotel window and saw 84 ambulances on the morning of September 5, 1939, he smelled blitzkreig. Ten days later Dannie was in Denmark with $4, all he was allowed to take out of Germany of the $1,000 he'd saved from his Wintergarten salary. Instead of mooching from the United State Embassy he dickered with a Danish skipper, arranged for passage by waiting on table and polishing brass, arrived in New York with $65 in tips. . . . While Dannie was in Berlin he had a Polish girl friend with whom he usually conversed in French. This chatter always attracted some friendly German who bought drinks and casually asked the foreigners' opinion of Hitler. This was the cue for Danford and g. f. to chorus brightly, "Hitler is a great man. Look what he's done for Germany." Standard ending of the party was for the Gestapo boy to get tight, bang on the table and yell "Und ve vill haf our rewenge." (Boy, the aspirin.)

Philadelphia is the headquarters for great magicians says Duke Ark, jr., star of the Casino Royal show. You should hear his yarn about the magico who after doing a fancy levitation, pranced out for applause and fell smack into the orchestra pit. . . . There's just a chance that "Jivin' Jack" Schaeffer will stay at Casino Royal instead of taking that place with the Capitol Theater orchestra.

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT. Pete Marcias' (Lounge Riviera) column about night clubs started something. One reader tells us that Washington's first night stop was not Cafe Republique but Chamberlin's, a place that flourished around Fourteenth and H streets in the Grover Cleveland era. Another informant pops the news that the Cafe Republique fountain is till playing.—in the Fall Church garden of Elmon J. Ewing, vice president of the Standard Engineering Co. Another says that Pete should have mentioned the old Harvey's where the guys and gals danced under Ballet Russe murals in the days before the great Nijinsky took up lunacy as a serious career.

SHAWLS VS. SPOOKS. There's a story back of the Starlight Roof's new practice of providing shawls for leddy customers. On nights when the breezes grew fresh, the girls took to wrapping themselves in the roof's tablecloths. Roger Smith's Manager Dan Wathey took one look and said, "Migosh, the place looks as though it's full of spooks. Buy a gross of shawls for the ladies."

ARTHUR HERBERT, melody master of the Starlight Roof

DEVASTATING MATRIMONY. Charles Sabin, dancing on the Shoreham Terrace, loses all his partners via the wedding route. Barbara Bennett married Morton Downey, Eleanor Ambrose married Sam Katz of the Balaban and Katz theater chain. Edwina Sinclair wedded the Baron d'Erlanger. Mary Hay, former wife of Richard Barthelmess, up and married a California broker. Now Mr. Sabin is looking suspiciously at current partner Merle Rutherford.

The boy with the arrows is busy in Hi Hat, has chosen tiny singer Marianne Lee for his target. There may be an engagement announcement any day.

THE BALLY BALLET. Wes Adams and Lisa, stars of the Lotus revue, are doing the most merciless job of ribbing the modern ballet ever seen in these parts. If the Wigman or Graham dancers ever see it they'll go off in a corner and sob quietly. But folks who've been bored to tears by the ballet moderne just laugh and laugh until they make little Audrey look like a piker. . . . Bob Rinaldo, last seen at the Capitol Theater, is raising Lotus blood pressure with "cardiacs."

GOING PLACES. Owners Conrad Siebold and Fritz Miller of the New Bavarian are going to be temporary bachelors. Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Siebold have booked passage on a South American Cruise. . . . Martin of the Madrillon is suntanning himself at Asbury Park. . . . Glen Echo's Paul Kain is finally going to the World's Fair. He's been in Manhattan seven times this summer and never seen the Fair.

FACES IN PLACES. Mayflower Lounge. Mrs. Lionel Atwill deep in converse with Alva Johnston of the Saturday Evening Post. Col. John H. Jouett, genial head of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, discussing a tall icy highball . . . Mayfair. Eddie White, current emcee at the Earle Theater bobnobbing with Jack Durand, Capitol Theater headliner.

The Rustic Cabin will celebrate its second birthday next Tuesday, August 27, with a monumental party. There'll be favors for everyone, prizes and a big and glossy floor show. This is something to put down in your date book.

YOU SHOULD KNOW that Nadine's Co-Eds will wind up their long and successful Maryland Gardens engagement about Labor Day. Chances are that they'll go to a New York spot. . . . That Manager George Osmolski of the Anchor Room has just celebrated his birthday. That "Chuck" O'Donnell is back behind the Anchor bar minus his tonsils and 15 pounds. . . . That the air of the Rainbow Room is thick with unspoken words. Because musicians Tony Gaudio and Parley Eaton have been tactless enough to whale the dickens out of their boss, Milton Davis, at golf . . . That Del Rio's manager Herbert Sachs has invented a strange but delicious beverage he calls "Red Rummle."

PERFECT PEACE. The Harrington Tavern is proud of the fact that it is the quietest place in town. There are big red divans, soft lighting, waiters that step noiselessly. Relaxing is the word for it. O'Donnell's Farms. Les Colvin RECOMMENDED ROAMING, and his quaint songs. Superb country style dinners. Tomorrow night there'll be dancing to a Sidney orchestra.

Gay Nineties. Right on the beautiful Mount Vernon boulevard. Al Oddone's rollicking dance music. Fine songage by Franny Grady.

Nightingale. Rodd Raffell's 13-piece band is notable for brilliant arrangements in the 1940 manner. Just three miles below Alexandria.

Club Esquire. Big floor show that lasts a couple of hours. "Triple-voiced" Billy Brill is the star and that clever showman Mickey Strauss is emcee.

Nazis Expect Their Big Guns To Command the Channel

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 22.—German long-range shelling across the English Channel is ready to begin full force bombardment that will put the entire Channel in German control, authoritative German sources said tonight.

The well informed Berlin news commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland said today's "range finding and practice shelling" indicated that the Channel-splattering battery positions have been completed along the coast of France.

"Germany now has a weapon to control the Channel," the commentary said, adding that its "force shortly can make itself felt."

Range of the big guns, however, was kept secret.

(German military sources have been quoted before as saying they have cannon capable of shelling London—90 miles from the French coastline emplacements.)

Nazi military informants meanwhile declared the mining of British waters had assumed "threatening proportions" with the Bristol Channel life-line for supplies from the United States on the British west coast commanding major attention from Nazi mine sowers.

Minesweepers have been observed for days, the German informants declared, attempting to clean out mines laid by German planes. The sweepers were said also to be employed now as pilot boats for merchantmen.

Merchant ships bearing supplies which Britain must have are being forced to pick their way at a snail's pace through the mined waters or come to a standstill until the minesweepers are free to accompany them, the Germans asserted.

"The mining of the Bristol channel, together with extensive destruction of port facilities in most of its harbors by our air force means a perilous blow to Britain's supplies of raw materials and foodstuffs," they said.

Relaxing her aerial siege, Germany kept most of her military air power grounded during the day, again abstaining from mass bombing attacks such as last week's but she claimed a toll from "the usual armed reconnaissance."

[The Germans are highly incensed about the near-destruction last night of Bismarck's mausoleum in Friedrichsruh, near Hamburg, the New York Time reported. It was stated that the location of this national monument, in a deep woods far distant from all highways and larger settlements, "clearly proves that Prime Minister Churchill gave his airmen the order to bomb this sacred sanctuary of the German people in order to destroy it." The nearest bombs, it was stated, fell 200 meters away.]

Sunken Bay Yawl Gets Danger Buoy

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 22 (AP).—The mast of a sunken yawl about 4 miles east of York Spit was marked today with a red and black buoy by the Coast Guard, according to Commander R. L. Lucas, commanding the Norfolk District Coast Guard.

Two unidentified men, crew of the 46-foot vessel, were rescued from Chesapeake Bay yesterday morning, according to word received at Coast Guard headquarters last night after their boat sank. The rescue was made by the crew of the Bay schooner Coley Adams.

The mast protrudes about 3 feet from the water.

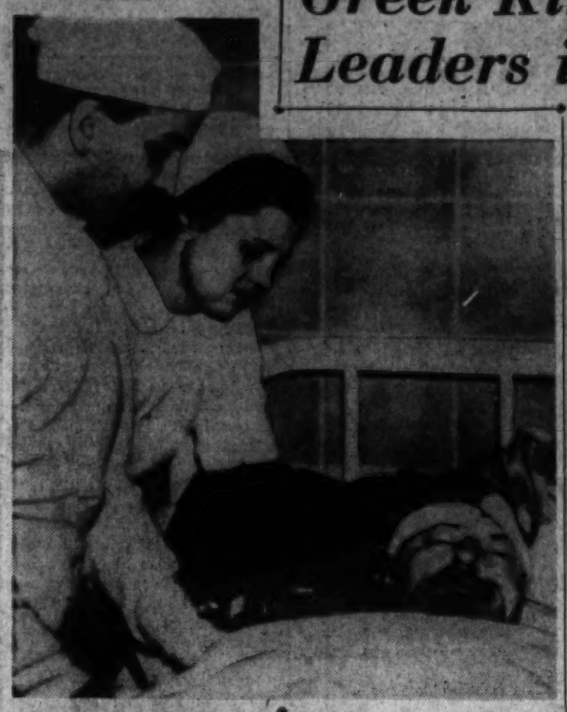
Greek King Calls Leaders in Crisis



Italian Ultimatum Rumored; Warships Reported Off Coast

By the United Press

Athens, Friday, Aug. 23.—King George II met with his ministers and defense leaders in a hurriedly summoned conference at 2:15 a. m. today as unconfirmed reports spread that both Italian and British warships were cruising off the Greek island of Crete.

The emergency conference at the foreign office gave rise to rumors of impending grave developments in the mounting tension between Greece and Italy.

(In London reports were published from Belgrade that Italy had served a 24-hour ultimatum on Greece, demanding under threat of war that she renounce the anti-aggression guarantee which she holds from Great Britain. A British spokesman in Athens reaffirmed the guarantee Thursday.

British May Occupy Islands

(There was speculation in London that the British fleet might land forces to occupy Crete and Corfu if the Greeks appealed for protection.)

Before the emergency hour-long conference this morning the ministry of interior was understood to have been informed by the chief of police of a small island 20 miles northwest of Crete of a battle yesterday between a plane, presumably Italian, and British warships.

The battle, described as particularly heavy, was said to have lasted for three hours.

The presence of King George II at the emergency conference gave the situation grave and portentous significance.

Others summoned to meet with Premier George Metaxas and the King were the undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, the ministers of army, navy and aviation and the chief of the general staff.

Only yesterday a British spokesman had announced that the British navy and air force will come to the aid of Greece immediately if Italian forces, now concentrating along the Greek-Albanian border, launch an invasion.

Reports of new concentrations of Italian troops on the frontier of Albania were said by well-informed quarters to have been discussed by the King and his ministers and defense leaders.

complete. The girl, who intrdqueed Jackson to Trotsky, insists she had no knowledge that Jackson planned to kill him or that she knew he was a Soviet agent.

Ten police were guarding Jackson in the police hospital where Trotsky died, to prevent either an attempt on his life or a suicide.

Miss Ageloff, arrested when she arrived at Trotsky's home soon after Jackson had attacked the old Bolshevist with a pickax Tuesday, was likewise guarded, sometimes in the hospital, sometimes in her hotel.

Shaw interviewed her at the hospital, at the request of her father, Samuel Ageloff, who is expected here by plane.

Meanwhile authorities stated that, despite several versions of Jackson's nationality, he had United States citizenship papers when he visited Mexico in 1938 and 1939, although he subsequently entered as a Canadian.

Albert Goldman, Trotsky's United States attorney, arrived by plane this afternoon and went into conference with Mrs. Trotsky on funeral plans while hundreds filed past the casket, lying in a private funeral chapel.

Goldmansaid Jackson, also known as Jacques Vandendreischd, had admitted "he was ordered by the OGPU to kill Trotsky or forfeit the life of his mother in Russia."

In New York, Alexander Kerensky, head of the revolutionary government which overthrew the Russian Czar, "agreed "Stalin dictated Trotsky's death," but declared Trotsky himself was "the most merciless of all Bolshevist terrorists—dead by the same means he sponsored.")

Trotsky, who had found a haven in Mexico since 1937, died last night from head wounds inflicted during a sudden attack in his study Tuesday. Police said Jackson confessed, saying he was "disillusioned" by Trotsky's political trend.

The 60-year-old Bolshevist himself, on his deathbed, told associates he was convinced his assailant was an OGPU agent. Last May 24, Trotsky and his wife escaped a machine-gun attack, for which a score of Mexicans were arrested.

Trotsky's body, encased in a glass-covered coffin, to which was attached a card bearing what his associates say was his deathbed testament: "I am sure of the final victory of the Fourth International. Go forward!"

(Trotsky's body will be cremated, and his ashes "given to the sea" if a public funeral is permitted in New York, James P. Cannon, national secretary of the Socialist Workers Party, said in New York today.

(Cannon said he expected word soon on the attitude of the Mexican government and American authorities in Mexico toward taking the body from that country.)

[The United Press learned Trotsky had been working on two biographies, one of Lenin and the other of Stalin. The latter one was said to be almost ready for its American publishers. Trotsky's notes were reported to be copious and in excellent shape and it was believed both works could be completed.]

nationalistic school.)

Heading the list of those recalled was Kensuke Horninouchi, soft-spoken Ambassador to Washington for two years. His successor has not been named, but political observers believed the choice might be Yoshisuke Aikawa, a spectacular industrialist sometimes called "the Henry Ford of Japan."

Horinouchi long has been criticized by many influential Japanese who assert that he failed to prevent several developments in Washington considered inimical to Japan's interests, such as abrogation of the commercial treaty and restrictions on export of aviation gasoline.

Four Other Ambassadors Recalled

His successor is expected to concentrate on efforts to insure that such American supplies as oil and scrap metal will continue to be available to Japan.

Besides 19 ministers affected, Matsuoka emptied four other ambassadorial posts and ordered home 19 ministers and 16 consular officials.

The ambassadors recalled, besides Horinouchi, are: Brazil: Kazue Kuwashima.

France: Lenzo Sawada.

Turkey: Toshihiko Taketomi.

At large: Masaaki Hotta (now in China).

Ministers affected are those to Canada, Spain, Argentina, Peru, Chile, Colombia, Venezuela, Panama, Mexico, Afghanistan, Hungary, South Africa, Finland, Rumania, Latvia, Egypt, Bulgaria, Iran and Iraq.

Alexandria Driver Fires on 2 He Says Attacked Truck

Baltimore, Aug. 22 (AP).—An Alexandria (Va.) truck driver early today fired twice at two men later charged with throwing stones through the truck's windshield.

Max Harrel, the driver, said the incident might have been a case of mistaken identity. He explained a current strike of Richmond truck drivers had not affected his company.

Harrell said two men, later identified as William L. Evans, 34, and James S. Gauldin, 27, both of Baltimore, tossed the rocks. At a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Meyer Reamer, the two asked a continuance until Tuesday because their counsel was out of town. They were released in $500 bail each.

Paul Block, jr., 29-year-old son of the publisher of the Toledo Blade and other newspapers, was married in Rockville, Md., Wednesday to Miss Eleana B. Conley, 27, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., it was disclosed here tonight.

Block and his bride left shortly after the ceremony on a honeymoon trip. Friends here said the couple met about five years ago.

Legislative Sabotage

Six Congressmen have taken responsibility for depriving 663,000 citizens of the District of Columbia of basic American rights that elsewhere in the country are taken for granted. Those six are a minority of the House Rules Committee of 14 members. And, of course, that committee is a small minority of the House composed of 435 members.

The men who turned this trick in legislative sabotage are Representatives Cox, Smith, of Virginia; Nelson, Lewis, of Colorado; Colmer and Clark. Their performance is the more inexcusable because the Sumners resolution was not referred to them for analysis on its merits. It went to the Rules Committee solely for clearance so that it might be debated on the floor of the House. The Judiciary Committee had already found this proposed amendment to the Constitution to be in proper form and had recommended it as an essential step toward improvement of the District's undemocratic form of government.

The granting of suffrage to Washingtonians became an issue at the present session of Congress largely because the Democratic Party indorsed the proposal in its platform. Democratic leaders of the House, as well as the Judiciary Committee, were apparently eager to redeem this party pledge without delay. Many Republicans had expressed a desire to lend their support. Yet six Democratic Congressmen have denied their colleagues the opportunity of even voting on a resolution specifically designed to carry out their party's pledge.

The result may be to prevent Americanization of the Capital City for many years. No one can foresee what will happen to the Sumners resolution in the new Congress that will meet next January. So the outlook is very discouraging. Washington is accustomed to having important local bills delayed or hastily enacted in accord with the whims of a few Congressmen. But it did expect that the measure designed to minimize such arbitrary rule would be considered on its merits.

There was some hope that the Senate might take up the proposed amendment in spite of the recalcitrant attitude of the House Rules Committee. But not much could have been accomplished in that way. If it were passed by the Senate alone, the resolution would die when Congress adjourns.

Disappointing as this outlook is, however, the fight for better government in the District must continue. The reactionary stand taken by six members of the Rules Committee illustrates how imperative it is for the District to acquire a larger measure of control over its own affairs.

Big Bertha Barrage

When France fell, there were many prophets of calamity who gave England short shrift indeed. An awesome picture was painted in the press and by radio commentators of the blitzkrieg that was about to smash the only nation still in the field against Germany.

It was predicted, among other things, that in preparation for their assault on Great Britain, the Nazis would lay down an impenetrable curtain of fire on the southeast coast of Britain from artillery emplacements on the French coast. Screened by that barrage against molestation by the British fleet and the Royal Air Force, the Nazis, it was said, would be in a position to land a large force on enemy grounds.

The course of events thus far has failed to sustain such predictions. The assault on Great Britain was delayed far beyond all expectations. When it came it took the form of a succession of air raids which for the better part of a week daily grew in intensity only mysteriously to decline to sporadic attacks by individual planes. And it is only now, a fortnight after the assault began, that any serious artillery fire from the French coast has been experienced by the British.

On this occasion, however, there was none of that anticipated curtain of fire across the Channel. Yet Thursday's shelling was intense enough, the missiles flying over the Channel at the rate of one a minute, with 100 shells being fired in all.

It is quite possible that this was only a curtain-raiser for more intense artillery action later. But if Thursday's shelling is any criterion, the Germans may find that the game is not worth the candle.

The target of the artillery barrage was a mile-long British convoy threading through the Channel. Yet every one of the ships managed to pass safely through the Straits of Dover. Incidentally, that circumstance gives the lie to repeated claims by the Germans that the Channel is under their control.

Conscripting Dollars

The so-called wealth-drafting amendment which Senator Lee attempted to append as a rider to the conscription bill was fortunately rejected on a constitutional point of order. But since the debate on the proposal showed a great deal of muddled thinking on the part of some Senators, it is still worthy of careful examination.

The Lee plan provides for a system of forced loans to cover the cost of war, or defense borrowing. The President would be given the power to require individuals to invest in Government bonds in accordance with their ability to pay. These bonds would not be transferable, would bear interest not in excess of 1 per cent, and would be subject to taxation.

It sounds plausible to argue that this type of capital levy is justified as a draft upon wealth since men are to be conscripted for service. But the analogy is utterly misleading. If men are drafted, it will be because the draft is considered essential to build up the trained army required for defense purposes within a limited period of time.

There is no corresponding need to draft dollars. Idle funds are available in abundance to finance the defense program. Of course, if there were a dearth of investment funds for the purchase of Government bonds, extreme measures might have to be employed.

Even in an emergency, however, forced loans of the type called for by the Lee amendment would be a highly dangerous expedient not to be lightly undertaken. For if individuals were forced to buy bonds in accordance with their means, men with capital invested in essential productive industries might be compelled to liquidate such holdings to obtain cash for Government bond purchases. The result would be serious demoralization of the capital markets, which would retard and not advance defense plans.

What the Government needs is assurance that the productive capital equipment of the country will be available for use in manufacturing the ships, guns and munitions necessary for defense purposes. It should also make sure that industries working under Government contracts do not profit unduly. The proper remedy in this case, however, lies in the taxation of excess profits, not in capital levies that would disrupt industrial operations.

If industrial cooperation could not be obtained on fair terms, it might and doubtless would become necessary for the Government to take over control of essential defense industries. But Senator Lee's proposed amendment does not envisage any such contingency. It is simply a crude plan to force the purchase of Government bonds which would have the effect of disrupting industrial operations instead of making industry a more efficient partner of the Government in carrying out the defense program.

Some of our Senators have certainly been led sadly astray by alluring catchwords about the necessity of drafting wealth as well as man power.

Refugees In France

"I do not pretend," said Marshal Petain in a statement to American correspondents at Vichy, "that this government is free. We are bound absolutely by the clauses of the armistice. The Germans hold the rope and twist it whenever they consider the accord is not being carried out."

In view of this tragic admission it is difficult to take seriously his contention that he has complete control over administration and activities in the unoccupied zone and is subject to no pressure with respect to internal affairs. The pitiful measure of freedom which Hitler has thus far granted the Vichy regime only emphasizes its state of subjection.

The aged marshal has declared that "France will remain devoted to the common ideals she holds with the great American democracies of North and South America, which are founded on respect for the human individual, on the cult of the family, community and nation, and on love of justice and humanity."

In this particular, however, a sharp distinction must be made between the will of the French people and policies now carried out by the Vichy government. The France that was crushed was truly devoted to those ideals. The France that will some day arise again will probably be faithful to them. But the Vichy regime appears to be too feeble even to make a stand on behalf of democratic principles.

Tragic proof of this is to be found in the report from Switzerland that hundreds of anti-Nazi refugees in unoccupied France have been rounded up and sent to Germany, which means to imprisonment, torture and possible death.

The government at Vichy may argue that it had no choice in the matter, that it was paralyzed by the terms of the armistice. But there is no evidence that it has made any attempt to save these unfortunates who had sought and found temporary haven in France. Indeed, there is evidence that in their anxiety to do nothing to offend the Nazi overlords, exit visas were withheld from refugees whom American nations, including the United States, had agreed to admit.

Marshal Petain's statement makes it clear that he is eager to win the good opinion of Americans for his government. But the Vichy regime will have to demonstrate by its action that it is entitled to such respect. Lip service is not enough.

Time For Action

Several days have passed without any substantial contribution to the arguments for or against compulsory military training. The debate in the Senate seems to be trailing off into trivialities, recriminations and statements of questionable accuracy.

Charges that the Army does not have sufficient equipment to train the men it wishes to draft are a case in point. Some of our legislators seem to have the impression that men drafted for training will be assigned in the first week of their service to the maneuvering of tanks. Gen. Marshall has done well to state in clear and unmistakable terms that the Army has sufficient guns and materiel to supply all the men it wishes to call for elementary training.

A useless furore has also been raised over the discouragement of one-year enlistments in the Army. Strangely enough, this criticism of the Army comes from Senators who are also contending that our greatest need is for a small mechanized military force instead of conscripted man power. It should be obvious to anyone that a professional army of highly trained men cannot be built through one-year enlistments. The one-year men whom the Army proposes to draft are needed for reserves and supporting units to a highly trained professional force.

Too much time has been wasted, also, in making petty charges such as that which Senator Wheeler directed against Secretary of War Stimson. It now appears that the so-called censorship to which the Senator took exception was an inadvertent act by a minor officer, and that Secretary Stimson and Gen. Marshall knew nothing of it. In any event, the incident was of no significance, for the information eliminated from the Recruiting News was readily available elsewhere.

Charges of this sort and the speech of Senator Holt yesterday suggest that the debate on the Burke-Wadsworth bill is trailing off into a filibuster. Whether or not opponents are deliberately trying to defeat the bill by these tactics, their long-winded speeches are having an unfortunate effect.

By all means this measure should be fully and adequately debated. But that does not mean talking should continue for the purpose of delaying action or thwarting effective preparations for defense. The time has come when the public demands more action than oratory.

The Mudville Epic

There are men whom the Muse pursues and surfeits with her favors; there are men whose lifelong importunities move her not at all. Again, there are men who, without any recollection of having met her socially, are suddenly astounded to discover she has left a hair upon their coat lapels.

One of these last was Mr. Ernest Lawrence Thayer, who died Wednesday at Santa Barbara, Calif., full of dignity and years. It is to Mr. Thayer and to the beautiful bass viol voice of the late De Wolfe Hopper that we owe the permanent inclusion of "Casey at the Bat" in our national literature.

A shade less popular, perhaps, than the rather maudlin "Face on the Barroom Floor," less truly a ballad than "Casey Jones," Mr. Thayer's poem is a far greater work than either. For it fills all the requirements of grand tragedy as specified by Aristotle, no less.

The tragedy of Mighty Casey is the tragedy of all proud men who in "haughty grandeur there" defy the gods by letting two called strikes go by. Mr. Babe Ruth in a World Series game at Chicago some years ago let two fast ones go by before he knocked the third high over the angle of the centerfield wall. The tragic self-destroyed figure in that case, however, was the pitcher, who had the impiety to groove even one strike for the Babe.

So great and so secure is the fame of Mr. Thayer's epic that there are several old-timers who claim to be the original Casey of Mudville. One of the principal claimants, we understand, is our neighbor, Mr. Daniel Casey, of Silver Spring, Md., who used to be with the Philadelphia Nationals in the days when a man needn't have been ashamed to admit it. But the whole controversy is pointless, like the efforts of certain scholars to prove that Homer was another fellow of the same name, or that King Arthur was never a king or that Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, was an Irishman. Casey is universal.

Broken Windows

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mark Sullivan expressed astonishment, recently, that so many people seemed to be tolerant of the Nazi philosophy. He wondered why. Perhaps it is because they feel that a general restoration of discipline is called for, both in the family and nationally, in order to prevent further "softening" of the Nation.

The superintendent of schools reported recently that it cost the taxpayers of the District of Columbia $16,000 last year to replace school window panes broken by vandals.

A community which confesses itself impotent to stop that sort of thing can expect no more than to have people feel that the Government which tolerates it has broken down. It ought not to be necessary for the average citizen to shout to high heaven about such conditions. The police authorities, supported by the taxpayers, ought to put a stop to it as a matter of course. But the sob sisters have had a clear field in coddling and encouraging those responsible for the growth of vandalism, purse-snatching and the like.

Mr. Willkie's reference to "candy-stick" Government shows that he is alive to our national weakness.

The Gas-Tax Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the District Committee in the House, has been criticized for introducing a bill to increase the gasoline tax 1 cent per gallon.

In line with established procedure, it has been customary for members of Congress to introduce bills by request, without assuming personal responsibility for them, and such action does not necessarily indicate their approval of such bills, and this was the case with Mr. Randolph. This bill was the outgrowth of conclusions arrived at by a number of District citizens who are taxpayers and deeply interested in keeping down all taxes, except where they are absolutely needed to meet the annual deficits, knowing full well that special taxes must be levied unless Congress is more liberal than heretofore.

The situation was thoroughly canvassed, and as taxes on real estate are now heavy, the consensus was that 1 cent added to the gas tax, raising approximately $1,300,000 the first year and more later, would be a most excellent way to keep down the necessity for heavy special taxes. With the proviso now in this bill that this particular fund should be placed in the general fund of the District, and as such a tax would not only be paid by every user of cars, but also by all visitors to the city, it would be a most equitable way of producing that amount of money.

This bill was presented to me for my opinion and after careful consideration I felt that it was one of the least objectionable methods of taxation. I discussed the matter with Mr. Randolph and he was willing as a favor to the sponsors to introduce the bill. It was not his bill, and he introduced it only as a matter of courtesy to a former member of the House and others, without in any way assuming any personal responsibility.

Mr. Ickes Objects

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing an identical letter to you and to the Editor of the Washington Star, on account of the identical methods your two newspapers used in publishing the political canard about me which appeared in the Star of August 19 and The Post of the 20th. I hope that you will give space to this letter, as an aid to your readers in the analysis of propaganda in the free press of America.

Protected by congressional immunity from the laws of criminal libel, Republican Senator Danaher, of Connecticut, on Monday offered a resolution which carried the innuendo that I stood to make a profit of $187,417.50 through the sale of 150 ungummed National Park Commemorative postage stamps which I had purchased for $82.50. His purpose was obvious—to spread a personal slander across the Nation in advance of my radio address commenting upon Wendell Willkie's acceptance speech.

The evidence offered to support the charge was a letter I wrote recently when I gave a set of blocks of four of these stamps, out of an original purchase of 200 of each, to a charity organization. My answer to this accusation, delivered through Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, was that the charge was rehashed from the 1936 campaign and that I would sell the stamps that afternoon to Senator Danaher for precisely what they cost me—their face value, $82.50.

In publishing this story, your newspaper was likewise protected from the laws of criminal libel by the rule of privilege which covers the proceedings of Congress. Did this also give you immunity from the ethics of journalism?

Under ordinary editorial practices, as I understand them, care would be taken, in handling a canard of this kind, to see that at least one salient sentence from the reply was placed among the first few paragraphs of the accusation. Care would be taken that, if the main headline carried only the charge, the "deck" below it would deal with the reply. Let me point out to your readers, for their future guidance, the subtle and well-protected method of defamation which both newspapers employed.

The Associated Press, in the first place, wrote the story so that the first two thirds of it was taken up entirely with accusation. Senator Byrnes' portion of the Senate colloquy trailing along at the end. Taken by itself, that might easily be accidental, as the story was not long and Byrnes was the second to speak. Then, both you and the Star published the story under a "deckless" heading, so there was no natural opportunity to do anything but use the heading of accusation.

Finally, both you and the Star broke the story over to an inside page, and broke it so that every word of the reply was buried in the inside. You know, doubtless, how many readers follow a story to the inside to learn that what they have read on the first page is false.

I do not know when I have seen all three of these subtle "techniques of defamation," known to every newspaper man and condemned by most, employed with such coincidental thoroughness in two metropolitan newspapers, on the same story, identically worded, in the same 24 hours. You assure me, do you, that my analysis is wholly, wholly erroneous? In that case I shall wait, long and patiently, to see you handle a story about the advertising manager of a department store in the same way.

Soldiers At $100 Per

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill is based upon the presumption that the majority of men are not patriotic enough to volunteer for military, naval or air service. The bill now provides payment of $30 a month with commissary added. In some cases the food and accommodations may be better than many working class men get while in other cases it may be equal or inferior.

The one real incentive to volunteer service would be a rate of pay higher than the average pay for non-military service. One hundred dollars as a minimum per month plus commissary service would not be excessive and would be an inducement to volunteer and evidence on the part of the Government that military service is worth decent compensation.

Millions of dollars are now being disbursed by the Treasury in payment of excessive pensions to retired Army and Navy officers and to retired judges. More millions are annually disbursed in excessive salaries to civil service employes whether considered as compensation for services rendered or as the equivalent for a decent standard of living.

If a Government can afford to pay the above millions without any justification it can justly compensate volunteers for military service or it has no just claim to their services. Any amount of sophistry might be indulged in that the volunteers were patriotic with the word spelled "pay-triotic," but it would be sinister and silly. Even patriotic citizens cannot afford to make too much sacrifice or allow their dependents to starve.

Raise the pay to $100 a month as an incentive to volunteer service and get the books ready for registration with an ample staff of clerks, or keep the pay low and violate every principle of democracy by compulsory service.

Subdued France

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Axis racketeers control their neighbors. Conquered and cowed populations are exploited as seems most profitable to the conquerors.

At present, Germany wants quiet in continental Europe. So, the form of accustomed political and economic organization is left to France and to the nations which suffer as does France. All are squeezed and will be squeezed without mercy.

Already German paper marks buy double the normal amount of French francs or goods; by decree, Germany thus takes half the value of all French goods and labor.

Already, French banks are under German control. All foreign values in French hands must be assigned to the Reichsbank; for their dollars, the French are given francs—good only in imprisoned France and at the rate of exchange set by German avarice.

The United States is far-seeing, wise and kind in refusing to allow French owners to be robbed of their American credits. When gangsterism is subdued, France will be liberated. Then, grateful Frenchmen will receive the assets, now "frozen" by the United States; they will thank the power which refuses to countenance theft.

For our own sake, we should realize that Hitler wants dollars in America to buy propaganda, spies and sabotage. No title to anything of value, on this continent, should be allowed to reach his hands.

The Post Impressionist

Pavlick

PAVEL IVANOVITCH had two styles of playing: the first, loud and fast, and the second, soft and slow. His method of practicing was very simple. He would play a new piece over, with no regard for tempo or rhythm, till he knew every note perfectly. Then he would set his metronome at the slowest possible speed and put the composition together, so to speak. Every day he would increase the speed one notch, till he reached the indicated tempo. Lastly he would settle upon the degree of loudness best suited to that speed.

According to Pavlick's method of interpretation, a fugue by Bach (loud and fast) sounded exactly like a composition by Satie (loud and fast) with the same metronome indication, and markings to indicate the various degrees of loudness meant nothing to him unless they were accompanied by changes in tempo. If a piece began loud and fast, it stayed loud and fast till there was a definite indication that it should become soft and slow.

Likewise, Pavlick's days were of two sorts: rich and happy days, and poor and sad days. On rich and happy days he disappeared almost wholly from my ken. From my seat at the rear of the balcony at Symphony Hall on Friday afternoons I would occasionally catch a glimpse of Pavlick in the most expensive seats, impeccably dressed and escorting some rich old lady from Beacon Hill. Or someone would tell me that he saw Pavlick at the Copley Plaza, in evening clothes, very much the grand duke, eating strawberries out of season in company with some lady known for her wealth and for her weakness for handsome young men. It was quite obvious that on his rich and happy days Pavel Ivanovitch had no soul at all.

On the other hand, his soul was very much in evidence during his poor and sad days. During those days, which were by far the more numerous, he would invite me to come over to see him.

"I am so unhappy, dearest Vanya," he would moan into the telephone. (Even during his very poorest and very saddest days he contrived to keep his telephone.) "Do come over and cheer me up."

There was an established routine for these visits, as rigid and mechanical as his playing of the Moonlight Sonata (soft and slow). When I knocked at the door of his dismal, damp, basement room, Pavel Ivanovitch would be playing something very soft and slow. In a saucepan over a gas ring a few potatoes would be boiling, adding their steam to the already saturated atmosphere.

Pavlick would greet me with somber dignity, hang my coat immediately above the boiling pot so that it would drip moisture during the next few days, and seat me on the divan beside him. Then he would inquire after my health and spirits and become increasingly depressed as he learned that they were both excellent.

"Ah, Vanya, how fortunate you are to be here in your own dear native land, with health and happiness and many friends, and with much money!" he would exclaim tragically.

At about this point the potatoes would be done. Pavlick would, after begging my permission to consume his dinner, proceed to eat them voraciously with salt and pepper but without any butter, while I sipped tea out of a glass and told him about last Friday's symphony concert, which he had not been able to hear because he did not have the measly 50 cents to get in.

The meal dispatched, Pavlick would turn to a minute examination of himself, his outcast state, and his wretched soul. Here he was, he would lament between gulps of scalding tea, an exile from his own dear native land, where his father lay in a nameless grave with a Bolshevik bullet through his brain because he had been an admiral (sometimes it was a general) and faithful to his Tsar, and his mother was starving in Paris. (On very bad days he also had a sister who was starving in Shanghai.) And here he was in a foreign land with no friends, no future, no prospects, and no money. Especially no money.

"And, dearest Vanitchka" (when we got to the Vanitchka stage I knew I might as well mark down $10 in the miscellaneous column of my budget), "I shall have to leave the conservatory at the end of the term because I have no money to pay my tuition, and at the end of the month they are going to take my piano away from me, and by the end of the week I shall not even be able to afford potatoes for my dinner."

And his soul was full of wretchedness and despair, and suicide was the best way out. In fact, suicide was the only way out, and who would remember or care when he was gone? "Except you, dearest Vanitchka, the only true friend I have," he would add as an afterthought.

When I would ask, practically, if he had gone to mass lately or if it had occurred to him to take his wretched soul to confession and get some part of this tremendous burden lifted from it, he would reply that he was in such despair that he was in no proper state to frequent the sacraments.

"But I still have my music," Pavlick would remind himself. "Would you like me to play something for you while I still have a piano to play it on?"

I would ask him to play some Skriabin for me, and while he played the Skriabin (soft and slow) I would put a ten dollar bill under his glass of tea. There are, after all, very few people in the world who can play Skriabin, and certainly no one else in the world could play Skriabin (soft and slow) quite as Pavlick could.

After I left, if I would stand long enough at the front door, I could hear the strains of Gershwin (loud and fast) coming from Pavlick's basement room.

Blockade And Hunger

By Viscount Cecil Of Chelwood

Special Correspondence of The Post

British Attitude Justified

London.

THE BLOCKADE of raw materials for munitions is far more effective and far more humane than other operations of war. But the blockade is understood to mean blockade of food and is generally visualized as a means of starving your enemy into surrender. Strictly speaking, I doubt if this has ever been achieved under modern conditions.

The Allied and associated food blockade of the central powers in the war of 1914 was very thorough. But it is more than doubtful whether by itself it would have brought the war to an end. Up until the armistice the German armies had enough to live on and, though the civil population at home endured considerable hardship, there is little evidence that during the war they suffered seriously in health.

It is quite true that, owing to a grave error, the blockade more or less continued for a few weeks after the end of the fighting. It is also true that great loss of life occurred in many belligerent countries at that time. But that was not mainly due to the blockade, for loss of life went on for weeks after the blockade was completely raised. It was due to the general dislocation of international trade, a result partly of the want of shipping—much of which had been destroyed by warlike operations—and, still more, to suspension of credit and confidence, largely aided by internal disturbances in the principal vanquished countries.

THAT THE BLOCKADE had a great effect in hastening the victory of the Allied powers is not disputed. It exercised pressure on the morale of their opponents, not so much by physically disabling them—though undoubtedly some were underfed—as by depriving them of many of those amenities, such as soap, coffee and clothes, the want of which made them desire peace.

No one is going to say that the blockade is free of objections. It certainly is not. All that may be maintained truthfully is that compared with other operations of war it is more merciful and less horrible. It may be said that it falls with especial force on the weakest of the population. But that, after all, is due to the decision of the blockaded power. It is their government which determines how the available necessities are to be distributed; and if they choose to give the largest share to the fighting forces, that is their responsibility. In any case, is it not less terrible than that tens of thousands of women and children should be tortured to mutilation or death by such ghastly proceedings as the bombardment of Rotterdam or the sack of Nanking?

The truth is that there is only one cure for the horrors of war, and that is by preventing them from taking place. If all those who are justly horrified by the consequences of war would combine to extirpate it from international life, that would certainly be done. But it will not be accomplished by passing well-meaning resolutions, or by reproaching those who have been driven to take up arms in defense of all they hold dear.

It may be said these considerations justify the blockade of Germany or Italy since their people must accept the responsibilities for the government which they have chosen and which they serve. But what about the peoples of the countries who were overrun and enslaved by the Germans, especially those countries like Poland, Norway and Holland, which have never accepted German domination?

WHY SHOULD the victims of German violence now be deprived of food by the enemies of Germany? Their case is certainly a very hard one. The answer is that it is the Germans, not their adversaries, who have taken and are keeping food from the occupied countries. Poland, and to the lesser extent Norway and Holland, can, in peacetime, live without large imports of food. They are now threatened with scarcity. It is because their invaders ravaged their countries and looted their provisions. Whatever they might receive from the outside world would simply provide fresh booty for their conquerors. Nor would any German assurances to the contrary improve matters, since Hitler and his subordinates have openly declared that they do not recognize it as a duty to keep pacts with foreign governments.

These considerations have even greater force in such regions as occupied France, which is for all practical purposes at present a part of the Reich. It is being governed by the Germans in the interest of Germany; its industry is being employed to strengthen German resistance in war and its ports and aerodromes are starting points for attacks on Britain. For the British to facilitate such supplies for such districts would be equivalent to a British subsidy for the enemies of Britain.

The case of unoccupied France is more difficult, and if we had any reason to suppose the Petain government had any real independence they might claim the same treatment as other neutrals; but the most charitable view of their conduct is that they are not free agents. Whatever may be said of the ingenious special pleaders, the broad fact remains that in defiance of the express undertaking of the French government this man may throw in his hand with the enemies of the Allies—in effect try to place the French fleet, the French air force and their potential armaments at the disposal of our enemies.

IT IS CERTAINLY impossible for us to take any action which would assist such a government or to place any reliance on the pledges which they might give us. But we have no quarrel with the French people; on the contrary we recognize the loyalty of many of them and we hope to see them again independent and prosperous, ready to cooperate with peaceful powers in establishing a permanent defense against aggression.

If, therefore, any plan can be devised which would mitigate the sufferings of the people as distinguished from their present government without strengthening their oppressors it certainly ought to be most carefully and favorably examined. In the meantime do not let us forget that the best service we can render to Europe and the world is to put an end to the tyranny which has devastated so many of its fairest provinces.

If the war is prolonged even for months by the weakening of our blockade, the sum of human suffering would be vastly increased. As soon as the war is over, every effort must be made to diminish the miseries caused by it and detailed plans and preparations should be now elaborated for that purpose.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Foul Insinuations

THERE HAVE BEEN several cracks from editorial and political spokesmen of the Social-Democratic Party about the fact that Wendell Willkie's home address is 1010 Fifth avenue, New York. That is the fact, and it is their privilege to make what they can of it, but, of course, it is understood that this address is mentioned not to let people know where Willkie lives but to suggest that he is a predatory dude and no bargain for the common people.

It is just too bad that the Americans have to make such a cheap and pathetic spectacle of themselves with dirty insinuations of this kind at this time, but the Social-Democrats are making the rules of this campaign, and they can't expect to be allowed to drop in low punches without any return.

Naturally, the Willkie people will pop them back, and Mr. Willkie himself already has mentioned that his small apartment on Fifth avenue is not far from the private home of President Roosevelt, which, incidentally, is not a small apartment but a house, and which, also, was given to him by his mother and not bought out of his own earnings.

AND HAROLD ICKES, who made the most recent mention of Willkie's private address, thereby certainly courted the observation that he himself has not only one home but two—one in Winnetka, Ill., on a street called Private Road, and the other in Maryland, just outside Washington, which is pretty good housing for a professional bleeding-heart, but in either case a disadvantageous position from which to pull supercilious snoots at the snobbishness of a man residing at 1010 Fifth avenue.

Of late Ickes has been extremely sensitive on the subject of personal asperions and smears, forgetting, no doubt, that back in 1932 the Social-Democrats had the public rolling on the aisles with their unconventional belts at poor old Alexander Throttlebottom Hoover. Mr. Ickes himself doesn't like them down there, but when he is doing the punching he draws the foul line down around the kneecaps, and when he is catching anything south of the Adam's apple is a deliberate and dastardly foul and likely to debase the solemn referendum.

THE SOCIAL-DEMOCRATS can decide what kind of campaign this is to be, but if they insist on a repetition of the Charlie Michelson smear of 1932, which they enjoyed so hilariously at the expense of the stuffy and awkward Mr. Hoover, they will have to be prepared to take much more than they can give.

And if Ickes will insist on smearing at the significance of Willkie's home address and the manner in which he arrived at that address if will do him no good to yell, "Keep Them Punches Up!" when people make note of his two home addresses and trace the easy evolution of impecunious Johnny One-Suit that he was into the master of two high-suburban homes. The bleeding-heart business obviously is a pretty good business if Harold Ickes can be used as an example.

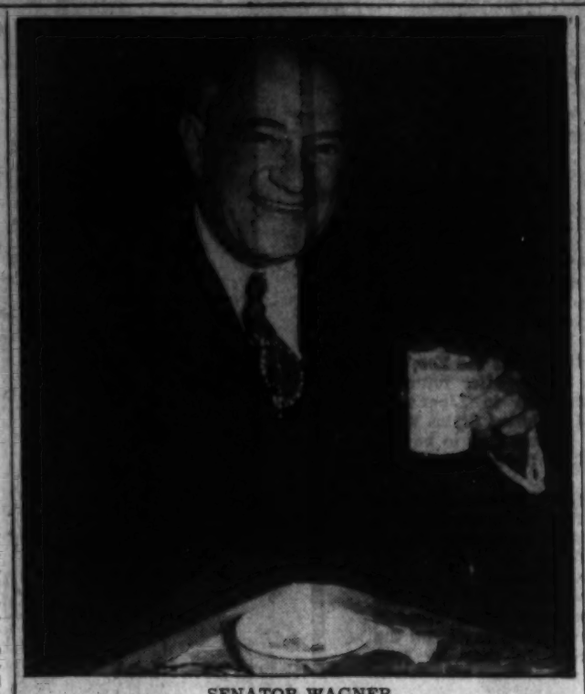
Willkie already has expressed his enthusiastic desire to file a schedule of all his property and, no doubt, would be willing to explain in detail also how he came by every nickel, and anyone who tries to fault him on the score of his home address or holdings, including Mr. Ickes, had better be prepared for a challenge to do the same.

The Social-Democrats had better change the subject, because if they insist on smearing it through this time their smear and the countersmear will make an awful spectacle of the democratic process before the neighbors, including Hitler, and badly impair, if not destroy, public confidence in the next President of the United States, whoever he may be.

THE SUBJECT of apartments in the New York dude belt is worth a separate story. About 20 years ago there was a great blurt of juvenile enthusiasm for the cooperative apartment, in which, theoretically, a man could live forever at nominal expense for upkeep, but some of the original buyers died and a lot of others went broke in the crash and used the railings of their penthouse terraces as diving stands to leap out into space and end it all.

You just can't walk out and leave the key with the doorman and be done with it. Your financial obligations as part owner still pursue you and your heirs and assigns, and I have been offered as a gift a double-decker half the size of Grand Central whose owner spent a quarter of a million on it and now can't give it away. At least, he can't give it to me, because the maintenance and the legal expense of foreclosure and of suing busted defaulters, or the estates thereof, run the cost of this rent-free bower up to something fantastic.

It is much easier to get shed of an expensive mistress. After all, they die, but these cooperative apartments were built to last forever.



SENATOR WAGNER

The question of whether Wendell Willkie was or was not affiliated with the Tammany organization is not, of itself, very important, says Ernest Lindley, citing the Senator's record

Willkie And Tammany

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Holier-Than-Thou Attitude

THE RECORD seems to sustain the assertion, indignantly denied by Wendell Willkie, that he was for a time a member of Tammany Hall. Tammany Hall is the common name for the regular Democratic organization of New York County.

A citizen living in this county, its boundaries being identical with those of the Borough of Manhattan, may vote Democratic and even enroll as a Democrat for the purposes of voting in a primary without becoming a member of Tammany Hall. The accepted method of affiliating with the organization is by joining the Democratic club in his district. According to reliable witnesses and apparently indisputable records, Mr. Willkie, in 1934, joined the Grover Cleveland Democratic Club, in the Fifteenth Assembly District of New York County, or Manhattan, and for two years paid his dues.

Mr. Willkie seems to have become even more prominently associated with Tammany politics. In 1935 both he and his wife were elected to the Democratic county committee as candidates of the Tammany leader of the Fifteenth Assembly District.

THIS IS the "silk stocking" district of New York City. In addition there was, that year, a fight for the control of the Democratic organization in that district—which made the Tammany leader even more eager than usual to summon to his aid the services and names of Democrats of good reputation. Mr. and Mrs. Willkie were in fine company. On the slate were, among others, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Farley, Frank C. Walker and Bernard M. Baruch.

Unless he can refute this record, it is difficult to understand how Willkie could bring himself to denounce as a "plain and simple falsehood" the assertion that he had been a member of Tammany Hall. He may have meant that he never held public office as a New York Democrat. Of this no one accused him. He may have meant that he did not belong to the Society of Tammany, the ancient patriotic society from which Tammany Hall derives its name. The society is still alive and its sachems are prominent Democrats, but it does little except to hold a July 4 celebration.

By Tammany Hall, politicians, political writers, and the general public mean the regular Democratic organization in New York City, and so they have meant for decades. Away from New York City and its environs, the term is sometimes used in a broader sense to cover the regular Democratic organization in all five counties within New York City. But the organization which Willkie joined—unless the records are wrong—was the genuine Tammany in its home bailiwick of New York County.

WHETHER WILLKIE was or was not a Tammany man is of slight moment in itself. Other men have affiliated themselves with the organization—even, as in Willkie's case, held party office within it—and still been recognized as honest and thoroughly reputable citizens. Many have even held public office as the successful nominees of Tammany Hall without suffering loss of good reputation.

Senator Robert F. Wagner is not only a Tammany office holder, but a Tammany-reared politician. If Willkie, before the end of his political career, can boast that he has done one-half as much as Wagner for the benefit of the Nation, he will have something to be proud of.

Unless I am misinformed by acquaintances of his in Ohio, Willkie's record there will show a participation in the operation of machine politics even more active than his membership in a Tammany club and service on Tammany's county committee.

WILLKIE'S RECORD in these respects is important only because he has seen fit to pose in a holier-than-thou attitude. It is amusingly ironic that an answer to him should have been made by Harold L. Ickes, one of the most self-righteous men in American public life.

Personally, I preferred the more dignified radio speech of Edward J. Flynn, new chairman of the Democratic National Committee. To Willkie he is "Boss" Flynn. But he is a boss whose record has been combed many times without disclosing anything wrong. His diction and his voice tone are better than Willkie's and Ickes', and his conception of the level on which national debate should be conducted seems to be higher than either of theirs. Somehow even the best amateurs and semiprofessionals, such as Willkie and Ickes, do not seem to be more deserving of respect than the first-rate professional politicians, such as Joe Martin, Jim Farley and Ed Flynn.

Italy's War

By Barnet Nover

Berbera And After

IN FORCING the British to evacuate Berbera and abandon British Somaliland after a campaign of only 15 days, the Italians have won their first real victory in the present war.

That campaign apppears to have been well conceived and ably executed. But the outcome was never in doubt. The elimination of France as Britain's ally meant that the whole of Italy's East African force could be hurled against the small British garrisons in Somaliland without danger of a counterattack from the direction of the neighboring French colony.

In command of the sea, the British could have reinforced their Somaliland garrisons. But Britain's eastern front is of vast extent. It runs all the way from Aden to the Libyan-Egyptian frontier. The men and equipment that might have been sent to Berbera to defend that port against the Italians could, the British high command decided, be used to better advantage elsewhere. Nor was any good purpose to be served by a fight to the last ditch. With the Italians still some distance from Berbera, the Somaliland capital was evacuated.

AS THE BRITISH see it, the outcome of the war will be decided at home; the struggle in Africa is merely a remote sideshow. They have, therefore, no intention of weakening the home front in order to strengthen their position in the Mediterranean and African sectors. At the same time, however, they have no intention of spreading themselves too thin in those fighting zones.

They are prepared to defend their communications in the Gulf of Aden, the Red Sea and the Mediterranean as long as possible. But it can be taken for granted that they will abandon those arteries too, if in doing so they can continue to fight on at home.

Fortunately for them this has not proved necessary. Aden, Suez, Alexandria, the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan are still safely in their hands and British sea power in the Eastern Mediterranean is still unchallenged. The jubilation of the Italians over the fall of Berbera is understandable. But the strategic significance of that victory is potential rather than actual. In the meantime the Italians have made no visible progress in the direction of Suez and have made no dent in British sea power. On the contrary, the British naval bombardment of Fort Capuzzo, on the Libyan side of the Libyan-Egyptian frontier shows how unwilling is Italy to risk a headon encounter with British sea power.

UNDER THE circumstances it is not surprising that the Italians are seeking to strike at the British along the eastern and western periphery of the Mediterranean—African battle area—rather than by a frontal attack. The invasion of British Somaliland is one expression of that strategy; the threatened assault on Greece, which may soon lead to actual hostilities between the Italian and Greek kingdoms, is another.

In control of such strategic Greek areas as Salonika and Crete, the Italians would be in a far better position to use their air weapon against the British fleet than they are now. But whether the campaign of intimidation which the Fascist press has been carrying on against Greece will succeed is by no means certain. Thus far the Metaxas government has remained firm, possibly because of the support it expects to get from Turkey and Soviet Russia, which is and has been on much less friendly terms with the Italian than with the German member of the axis. If that support is clearly indicated there is a possibility that the present state of Greco-Italian tension may subside. But there is no certainty of this and time presses, so far as Italy is concerned.

ITALY ENTERED the war on a shoestring hoping with little risk to achieve great gains.

On June 10 when Mussolini crossed the Rubicon the French army was already in a state of marked disintegration. The end came soon after. It is possible that the Duce calculated that once France had been knocked out Great Britain's capacity to fight on would be so seriously diminished that she would have no alternative but to give up the fight or, if she fought on, that she would speedily be conquered.

But after two months Great Britain is far from the end of her rope. What is particularly ominous, from the Italian point of view, is that even during the height of Germany's aerial assault on the British Isles, the Royal Air Force demonstrated sufficient offensive power to bomb Milan, Turin and other Italian cities.

It happened that practically all of Italy's industrial eggs are in one small basket—the Po Valley. If continued over a period of months, the bombing of the Italian industrial area of the north might have a very serious effect on Italy's fighting capacity and the morale of her people.

IN OTHER WORDS, the longer the anticipated German triumph in the Battle of Britain is delayed, the more parlous Italy's position is likely to become. The only saving factor for Italy would be the total and speedy elimination of the British from the Mediterranean and East Africa. In that event Italy would be able to shake off the strangling grip of the British blockade. She would no longer stand in danger of being starved out. She could then also join forces with Germany in a combined assault on the British Isles. But for the time being all that is a dream.

Italian Drive Against Egypt Reported Near

By the United Press

Rome, Aug. 22.—Authoritative quarters tonight said that a new offensive will be launched soon in North Africa by Italian forces, aimed at smashing British forces in Egypt and seizing the strategic Suez Canal.

Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, who shared honors with Marshal Pietro Badoglio in the Ethiopian campaign, is said to have been intensively preparing his forces in North Africa for a major offensive.

Although it is generally believed here that the Graziani offensive will be directed at British forces based in Egypt, the possibility is not to be excluded that the big push may instead be pointed against the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan with the aim of joining Libya and East Africa.

Would Isolate Egypt

In the latter case the Libyan offensive probably would be accompanied by a second offensive launched from Northern and Western Ethiopia in order to crush the Sudan from two sides in a mighty squeeze play which would join Italian territories in Africa and isolate Egypt from the remainder of the continent.

Meanwhile, the Italian high command reported that Italian submarines and airplanes had sunk a British submarine, torpedoed a British destroyer and heavily bombed a group of enemy cruisers in the eastern Mediterranean.

An official communique said that one force of bombers raided the British fortress of Gibraltar. One plane failed to return.

Official dispatches amplifying the communique said that in the cruiser attack Italian planes singled out two 10,000-ton and four 5,000-ton cruisers as special targets and carried out their bombardment in waves.

An Italian submarine accounted for the sinking of the British submarine and the torpedoing of a destroyer, the high command said.

An article in the newspaper Telegrafo, of Leghorn, organ of Count Galeazzo Ciano, foreign minister, said that Italy's colonial aim was the elimination of Great Britain from Africa.

It intimated that the next Italian drive would be against Aden, but that wherever it might come it would be of far greater proportions than the attack on British Somaliland.

(In Cairo, Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander in chief of British forces in the middle east, told his troops that "we very soon shall have plenty of work to do." Italian planes meanwhile dropped four bombs on the British naval base at Alexandria but damage was reported slight.)

Egyptian Troops Poised

Cairo, Aug. 22 (DNB).—Motorized Egyptian troops at the western frontier were poised tonight to resist any surprise blow by Italian forces, whose main base at Tobruk, Libya, was subjected to damaging attack by British bombing planes.

Egypt, thus far a "nonbelligerent" ally of Britain served notice she would jump into the war formally and completely, in the event Italian invaders touch her soil.

This notification was given by War Minister Keissy Pasha, who declared a mobile Egyptian division has taken up key posts at the Egyptian-Libyan border, and that Egypt's army "stands foursquare with the British, ready to resist invasion."

Britain's forces in Egypt and other African areas, meanwhile, hit hard at Italian bases and concentrations. Libya's main port of Tobruk was heavily raided by Royal Air Force bombers, who scored several direct bomb hits on naval oil tanks and a jetty, an R. A. F. Cairo communique related.

R. A. F. Bombs Fiund Marks

Damage was declared to have been inflicted also on landing stages at Tobruk and Eladem, used for the debarkation of troops sent from Italy to Libya.

A British raid on the Fascist air base at Sidi Eltnimi was said to have resulted in destruction of three big Sovoia-79 bombers parked on the field. Bomba also was raided and direct hits on a seaplane jetty claimed.

South African and Rhodesian air squadrons reconnoitered and bombed Mogadiscio, capital of Italian Somaliland, damaging a jetty and a hangar, while at Merka one parked Caproni bomber and several airdrome buildings were said to have been damaged by British bombs.

Sir Oliver Lodge, Spiritualist, Dies

spiritualist, Sir Oliver had for years conducted research and seances directed toward the goal of proving that he himself would survive in another world his death in this.

The message he left behind with the Society for Psychical Research is secreted within a series of sealed envelopes. He left instructions that each envelope is to be opened at each one of a series of seances and promised he would make every effort to communicate with the earth through the medium. He had said:

"When the right people are sitting with the medium, I will try to give them the message. But it might take as long as a year. I will not get anything in a hurry."

Contents of Sir Oliver's message were known only to the aged scientist himself. He had stipulated that only if his friends received communication from him through a medium was the message to be opened and read.

Shortly before Sir Oliver succumbed to his ailment of advanced age, he told friends at his bedside: "I hope to continue my scientific research on the other side."

Sir Oliver did not become interested in spiritualism and psychical science until he was 55 years old. Prior to that time he attained international note as a physicist and inventor. He contributed notably to the pioneering development of radio telegraphy and perfected numerous new uses and data in the field of electricity and general physics.

Sir Oliver lived long enough to regret some scientific advances made by twentieth century workers.

"We know things that we never should have known—things of the devil," he declared four years ago.

"Think of radio—my first love. I never dreamed that an electrical discovery of mine would ever be used to send airplanes to bomb innocent children. Yet that has happened.

"And I feel responsible, even though other hands than mine brought fulfilment of that idea. If that is the use science makes of new knowledge, then I wish the secret of wireless signalling had never been made clear to me."

Social Security Building Slightly Damaged in Fire

A cigarette, carelessly tossed into dust from a sawmill at the new Social Security Building, Fourth and C street southwest, last night touched off a blaze that caused $500 damage to the new Government structure.

Flames swept upward from the sawmill and caused a gasoline tank to explode. Firemen extinguished the fire after battling it for 38 minutes.

U. S. Medical Aides Sail for Britain

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Twelve medical volunteers, including seven American surgeons, sailed today aboard a British liner for England to aid in caring for English wounded.

The group, headed by Dr. Philip D. Wilson, chief surgeon of the hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled of New York, carried with it $22,000 worth of surgical instruments and operating room supplies calculated to make it self-sustaining for six months. The Department of State granted special permission to volunteers to travel on a British ship.

Bell Bird Rings at Zoo's Door

THE BELL BIRD—IT RINGS LIKE AN ANVIL

The village blacksmith has nothing on the bell bird of Brazil, three specimens of which were installed yesterday at the National Zoological Park. The bird, which is about the size of a crow, has a call like the ring of an anvil, that can be heard a mile through the forest, according to Dr. William Mann.

Dr. Mann, director of the Zoo, who was taken ill shortly after returning from his expedition to Liberia, is recovering at the United States Naval Hospital. He expects soon to be able to have a look at the new accessions himself.

The bell birds, all white, were secured for him by A. Biemenwald, an employe on the steamship Brazil, whom he met on his return from Argentina last summer. Yesterday the newcomers viewed their strange surroundings with suspicion. None of them was sounding his anvil and the keeper predicted "it may be four months before any of those fellows will say a word."

After they get started they go right on talking, anvil fashion, he explained. He knows their habits, as the Zoo has had others previously, although there have been none for two years. They live on fruit and insects. Yesterday's luncheon was a carefully prepared dish of cut oranges.

Another newcomer from Brazil is a little grison or Grisonella Huronax. She is an unfriendly little creature, first cousin to weasels and skunks, who has been assigned a cage in the small mammal house, next door to a pair of others of her kind, brought back from South America by Dr. Mann last year.

Cotton Blooms on Tenth Street

THOMAS IN THE COTTON PATCH

"I was born and raised in Darlington County, S. C., down among the cotton fields," he said yesterday. "And when Presley Coker, of Hartsville, down there, sent me some seeds I just naturally planted them.

"I raised some last year, too."

"Why?" he was asked.

"I used to raise it and I wanted to raise it," he said. "I don't do anything with it. The Department of Agriculture takes it from me," he said. "I don't know why, except they are interested because I don't have any boll weevils."

When not raising cotton, Thomas serves as a laborer, on night hours, for the Internal Revenue in the Post Office. In that way he can get out between his two rows of cotton in the daylight.

Cotton plants are blooming this week in the little patch behind the home of James A. Thomas, at 1628 Tenth street northwest.

What is more, the plants have grown from seed from Thomas' old home State, and his annual attack of homesickness is improving nicely, thank you.

World's Largest Plane— The four-motored Army bomber, B-19, largest and most powerful plane builders ever attempted, is pictured as it neared completion in the Douglas Aircraft plant in Santa Monica, Calif. So big all could not be included in one picture within its hangar, the plane has a wingspread of over 210 feet and will weigh more than 140,000 pounds. Note comparative size of men

U. S. Building 'Superbomber,' Air Chief Says

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Aug. 22.—The biggest airplane ever built—a bomber capable of flying nonstop from New York to Europe, thence back and to Los Angeles—is nearing completion, Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Corps, revealed today.

The huge fighter has been under construction secretly in the Douglas factory at nearby Santa Monica for four years.

Lieut. Col. C. E. Bradshaw, Army Air Corps officer in charge of its construction, said the plane would be powered with four 2,000-horsepower engines, largest ever built. It will be in the air this fall.

With a wingspread of 212 feet and 112 feet long, its tail assembly alone is larger than the ordinary commercial plane.

The craft will have a gasoline capacity of 11,000 gallons. It will carry bigger cannon than any airplane in the world, but Bradshaw said the exact armament details were secret. The plane will require a crew of ten.

Earlier today, Arnold displayed the world's fastest military airplane—the Lockheed Interceptor—to William S. Knudsen, chairman of the National Defense Advisory Committee, and revealed it can fly more than 500 miles an hour.

Its speed, Arnold said, is 460 miles an hour at two-thirds throttle, but it is stepped up past 500 miles per hour when "wide open."

Its range is 1,100 miles; rate of climb, 4,000 feet a minute; armament, one rapid-fire cannon, shooting a 1-pound shell, and four machine guns.

Maj. K. B. Wolfe, chief production engineer for the Army Air Corps, said the Army has ordered a large quantity of these new type planes—"I can't tell you the exact number, but it is the largest order for combat planes under the national defense program. We hope to get delivery of 100 a month."

Britain Develops "Super" Plane

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—Britain has developed a new bomber-fighter plane—a "battleship of the air"—and it is reported that orders for some have been placed in Canada.

The specifications of performance, design, armament and armor are secret but the plane is described as "gigantic" with extra long range and almost impregnable to ordinary defense fire.

Solar Expedition To Sail Tomorrow For Inner Brazil

The National Geographic Society-National Bureau of Standards solar eclipse expedition will sail from New York tomorrow on a 9,000-mile journey to the interior of Brazil to observe an eclipse of the sun.

Delicate equipment totaling 15,000 pounds was loaded on trucks yesterday at the National Bureau of Standards for transportation to New York. The group will return after the five-minute eclipse October 1.

Members of the expedition include Dr. Irvine C. Gardner, of the Bureau of Standards; the Rev. Paul A. McNally, S. J., Georgetown College; Dr. Carl C. Kiess, Bureau of Standards; Dr. Theodore R. Gilliland, Bureau of Standards, and Richard H. Stewart, staff photographer of the National Geographic Society.

Col. Donovan Calls Naziism A World-Wide Conspiracy

The following is a condensation of the last of a series of four articles made public by Secretary of the Navy Knox as part of the national defense program. Col. William J. Donovan recently returned from a mission abroad, on behalf of Secretary Knox. He wrote these articles in collaboration with Edgar Ansel Mowrer, distinguished foreign correspondent.

Since we must ascribe a huge share in Adolf Hitler's incomparable military successes to his use of Germans and "fifth columnists" in victim countries, the question arises: How was such a success possible? How are Germans abroad brought to such self-sacrificing enthusiasm for the Nazi regime? How above all can foreigners living under relatively mild and civilized governments be induced voluntarily to betray their own countries for Hitler's Germany? It seems mysterious.

The answer is $200,000,000 spent annually on organization and propaganda abroad. The immensity of this sum is the secret. Nazi Germany is not a government—not even a "folkdom" of the sort Nazi orators talk about. Nazi Germany is a conspiracy. Its scope is universal and its aim is world dominion.

Its activities begin with attempted proselyting of Germans abroad, go on to the murder and kidnaping of real or fancied enemies, and end in armed insurrection against the foreign country Hitler wishes to conquer or absorb. Such insurrections of Germans actually occurred in Czecho-Slovakia, Austria and Holland. But for the firm attitude of the United States such an insurrection would, many students believe, have occurred in Brazil.

"Double Nationality"

That the Germans abroad are usually "naturalized" into something else is no hindrance. Prewar imperial Germany sanctioned the "double nationality status"—Germans could, that is, become French or American or Portuguese without losing their German nationality. The Weimar republic did not alter this strange conception and Nazi Germany has made it the center of its "Trojan horse" tactics of placing Germans within the enemy walls. It is safe to say that a very fair proportion of the nonrefugee Germans who have become American since Hitler came to power did so with the secret intention of turning free and democratic America into "their"—that is, Hitler's—America.

The center of the world conspiracy is the Nazi party. The tool is the Auslands—Organization (or "organization abroad") of this party. Today this organization of Germans abroad has nearly 4,000,000 members, all of whom are conscious agents. Over 800 local groups or "supporting points" are organized in 45 or more "Landesgruppen"—one in each country.

The headquarters is in Stuttgart, but all the groups are directed by a single man in Berlin, Gauleiter Ernst Wilhelm Bohle, with some 800 assistants.

Seven Other Groups

But everywhere, whether the members are Germans, naturalized Germans or non-Germans, the aim is the same—to achieve Hitler's end by trickery or terror; the organizing principle is the same, with SA and Hitler Youth and Hitler sport, marching, emblems, ruthless discipline, ceremonies in honor of Nazi heroes or Hitler's birthday parties; and in case of war they would all be on Germany's side. Organized Germans abroad are publicly told to "obey the laws of their guest country," but at the same time urged to "convince every outsider of the necessity of Germany's victory." The Nazi Party Auslands-Organization is by no means the only entity that works for Hitler outside Germany.

There are, in fact, no less than seven others. The political police, or Gestapo; the propaganda ministry of Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, the German Labor Front, the intelligence services of the German army, of the German navy and of the German air arm, and finally the German foreign office, with its embassies and consulates all over the world.

Together these eight organizations spend on propaganda, espionage and sabotage roughly $200,000,000 a year. It seems a lot of money, but Hitler has publicly expressed his intention of keeping this service at full blast even if it means fewer infantry divisions in the army. When one considers that this combined service, with its 30,000 employes, can probably claim credit for the ease of Hitler's many victories, it is obvious that the same result could hardly be obtained so cheaply in any other way.

Every Tourist A Spy

The German foreign office thus has two irons in the fire abroad. Thus the famous Capt. Wiedemann, general consul in San Francisco, was publicly congratulated by order of the Fuehrer in Berlin for his work in preventing the American Senate from accepting Roosevelt's modified neutrality legislation in July, 1939.

It must always be remembered that no German receives police permission to leave the Reich, regardless of the motives, until he or she promises to report everything seen and heard abroad. Each must declare his address to the nearest Nazi official and keep in touch with him so far as circumstances permit.

In the United States an organization of Nazis is being trained in arms. As matters now stand, it is conceivable that the United States possesses the finest Nazi schooled "Fifth Column" in the world, one which in case of war with Germany could be our undoing.

Could, but need not be. The Nazis are strong only where unopposed. Where they are resisted, where the initiative is taken from them, they tend to collapse. The revelations in the American press of the fortunes amassed and held abroad by leading Nazis kept Goebbels busy denying it for two weeks. It is hard to see why under present circumstances, in view of "fifth-column activity" observed abroad, countries that do not intend to submit to the Third Reich permit any German-language publications or why they do not adopt legislation allowing naturalizations obtained under false pretenses to be annulled by executive act, or do not insist on knowing just which domestic industries and commercial houses have tie-ups of any sort with the Nazis.

Failure to do this, failure to study and combat the entire Nazi Auslands-Organization may have tragic consequences. Unearthed in time, the Nazi conspiracy is relatively harmless.

Roosevelt Names U.S.-Canada Board

States and Canada, followed a morning conference at the White House between the President, Navy Secretary Knox, War Secretary Stimson, Attorney General Jackson and Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles.

Though only the vaguest of statements followed the parley of the high officials, it was believed that behind the closed doors of President Roosevelt's oval office there took place a last-minute reshuffle of the American section's membership.

Thus was explained the marked surprise that greeted announcement of Mayor LaGuardia as a member of the board. Though LaGuardia has been active in defense matters and a frequent caller at the White House, it was believed at first that the United States would be represented by such top-flight officers as Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations.

It was believed that the questions of supplying overage destroyers to Britain, leasing of naval and air bases from the British, and leasing of sites in Canada figured large in the noonday conference.

The group that met with the President was the same that conferred Wednesday in Attorney General Jackson's office. After that meeting an official statement said its subject had been questions involved in leasing British bases and sale of destroyers.

Uppermost on the agenda of the joint board Monday, well-informed officials said, will be an American plan to build impregnable bases, new Gibraltars of North America, on Canadian soil.

Most of these defense works would be located in Newfoundland and western Canada, it was said, because danger is expected to arise from those quarters should British resistance to Germany collapse.

Brother to the plan to lease Canadian soil is the President's plan to lease British sites on islands in the Carribbean and North Atlantic area, with special reference to the Panama Canal.

London reports have stated that only details remain to be settled before the British will turn over to the United States 99-year leases on strategic territory in this hemisphere.

The oil-rich island of Trinidad, near Venezuela, has been mentioned along with Bermuda as a likely location for a defense base.

Linked to the problem of acquiring British and Canadian bases—very closely linked in the opinion of some observers—is the well-publicized British desire to secure overage American destroyers to help in the fight against the German total blockade.

Proper Food Habits Can Be Easily Taught

Youngsters Love to Imitate Elders; If Daddy Drinks Milk, So Will Junior; New Vitaminized Cereals Popular

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

TO SEE Michael Murdock, age 2, fairly bubbling with joy as he eats a meal, is to know that he is also the personification of health and sunny disposition. There is no dawdling over his food and shaking of head in opposition. He comes to the table eager to eat, and with great gusto spoons his food with his tiny chubby hands.

Mike's beauty and bubbling disposition have resulted largely from his having been taught from babyhood to eat as he should. And "Mike," as his father, William D. Murdock, calls him, is benefited in three ways by this. He stands a better chance of getting his true requirements of foods; he enjoys food more, and he will not be unhappy when he grows up and eats in places where likes and dislikes of foods are given little heed.

Martha Ellyn

Parents Better Learn To Like Health Foods

Breakfast is a ritual with Michael—a part of his day's design. One idea he has conceived is that he should start the day eating breakfast with his dad. Another thought of his for a time was that his father should drink milk with him. Michael, like most children, is very observant and likes to be an imitator of his dad and do "just like" he does. This means that his father has a responsibility in setting the example of enjoying carrots, spinach or whatever the Murdock family menus offer.

For many months Michael has eaten his breakfast with his father, but recently he has decided to push his rising hour ahead about an hour and a half, which, of course, is of concern to Mr. Murdock since he does not go to bed as early as his son.

I asked Mrs. Murdock what Michael liked for breakfast, and she said that he "takes off" with orange juice, is fond of cereals and especially delights in puffed wheat and puffed rice because they crackle when he pours milk on them. And he drinks his milk, too.

Likes Them Because They Crackle

Since this tot likes puffed cereals—because they crackle (being too young to understand how good they are for him), he will undoubtedly like the new vitamin rain puffed cereals. These cereals have been enriched with vitamins B1, D and G by a process the food company calls "vitamin rain." With the additional vitamins present in 4 ounces of orange juice and 10 ounces of milk, for instance, you get 40 per cent or more of the day's minimum requirements of the five key vitamins, vitamins A, B1, C, D and G. So when Michael eats the newly vitamin processed puffed cereals with his usual quota of orange juice and milk he will start his day with a vitamin bonus.

The fortifying of these essential foods does not mean that they should be used only for breakfast, for they can be incorporated into casserole dishes, croquettes, used in making puffed cereal pie crust and for tarts; when crisped in the oven in butter they make a crisp and crunchy soup accompaniment. Many delightful candied concoctions can also be made, such as nut meringues, kisses, brittles, pralines, as well as such dainties as tea wafers, macaroons and jumbles.

Salmon Parsley Croquettes can be made using the desired cereals rolled into fine crumbs, as an ingredient. The following recipe makes 12 medium sized croquettes.

Salmon Parsley Croquettes

Make a white sauce of 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons flour and 1 cup milk. Season with ½ teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper, and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Roll 2 cups puffed cereal into fine crumbs and add ½ cup of the crumbs and one No. 2 can of salmon, flaked, to the sauce. Form into cone-shaped croquettes, dip into 1 beaten egg and then in the remaining crumbs. Fry in deep fat, 375 degrees until brown. Drain on absorbent paper.

To use the puffed vitamin rained cereals for topping casserole dishes, roll the desired quantity of the grains into fine crumbs. Combine with melted butter in the proportion of ¼ cup of crumbs to 1 tablespoon butter. Sprinkle over casserole dish and bake according to directions.

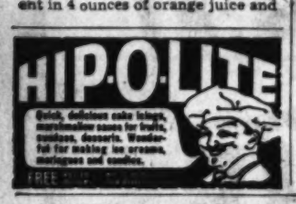
Puffed Cereal Tea Wafers are excellent to use on many occasions. They are simple to make. Following are the directions:

Puffed Wheat Tea Wafers

Mix 1 cup brown sugar with ⅛ teaspoon salt and 1 well-beaten egg. Stir in ⅓ cup melted butter and beat thoroughly. Add ¼ cup flour, ½ teaspoon vanilla, 1½ cups puffed grain and ½ cup pecans. Drop tiny bits of dough on buttered baking sheet and bake in a very slow oven, for 25 to 30 minutes.

Minute-Man Specials

Shape minute steaks to fit slices of bread. Crush 1 clove garlic and sprinkle with salt to absorb juice. Dust steaks lightly with seasoned salt. (This may be done at home, and the steaks packed with sheets of wax paper between them.) Grill them over the campfire embers, about 1 minute on each side, and place between slices of hot buttered toast.



HIP-O-LITE
Quick, delicious cake icings, marshmallow sauces for fruits, sundaes, desserts. Wonderful for making ice creams, meringues and candies.
FREE

When curly haired, vivacious, 2-year-old Michael Murdock, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Murdock, eats his breakfast, he does so with great enthusiasm. In the picture above, Michael is enjoying the popping of puffed wheat in milk, and at the same time benefiting from its vitamin enrichment

Relish Gives Fish Tang of Flavor

Recipes of Week Provide Several Novel Suggestions

By The Post Food Editor

THERE'S a brace of fine flavors in pickles, relishes or chutneys. These zestful foods have just the right amount of tang to perk up a delicate fish and bring out all the overtones of flavor in its choice white meat, or to give that complement needed for roasts, baked beans and sandwiches. The tangy flavor also gives dash to many familiar dishes; their color contributes to appetite appeal, and their crispness adds the interest of contrast to texture.

Garden and orchard products all go into the pickling vat to make these accompaniments that The Post recipe contestants have contributed this week. Following are the winning recipes:

End of Season Relish

$3 Prize
Mrs. Dewey W. Hillman, 525 North Piedmont street, Arlington, Va.

Recipe: Cut into coarse pieces, 3 cups green tomatoes, 3 cups cucumbers, 3 cups green peppers and 3 cups onions. Add 1 cup salt and 1 quart of water and let stand over night. Drain. Cut up 3 cups carrots and 3 cups celery and parboil. Drain. Boil for 5 minutes 3 cups vinegar, 3 cups sugar and 2 tablespoons white mustard seed. Then combine all the preceding ingredients and boil for another 5 minutes. Add one No. 2 can lima beans or equivalent. Rinse and drain canned beans. Bring all to a hard boil and put into sterilized jars and seal.

Peach Chutney

$2 Prize
Mrs. M. Hook, 313 Douglas street northeast

Recipe: Peel 4 quarts of peaches and remove stones. Add 2 cups vinegar to peaches and cook until soft. Add another cup of vinegar, ½ cup chopped onion, ½ cup sugar, ½ pound raisins, ¼ pound white mustard seed, 2 ounces scraped ginger root, 1 ounce red pepper and 1 ounce garlic. Mix these ingredients well. Add 2 cups vinegar. Boil the mixture for 15 minutes. Pack into sterilized jars at once.

Corn Salad

$1 Prize
Mrs. M. G. Ellis, Rockwood Manor Girl Scout Camp Bethesda, Md.

Recipe: Put into a large cooking vessel, ¼ of a large head of cabbage, chopped; 1 large onion, 1 green pepper, 1 small bunch celery or 1 teaspoon of celery seed; 1 teaspoon salt, ⅓ cup brown sugar (packed); ⅓ cup vinegar diluted with water to 1 cup; cinnamon as desired, ¼ teaspoon cloves and ⅛ teaspoon ginger. Cook these ingredients until cabbage is partially cooked, but not soft, then add 2 cups corn cut from the cob. Be sure to scrape cobs to obtain all the milk. Cook about 20 minutes very slowly. Watch closely so it does not scorch. Pack into hot sterilized jars immediately and seal.

Rhubarb Chutney

$1 Prize
Mrs. Grace F. Hiehle, 3422 South Dakota avenue northeast

Recipe: Wash 2 pounds rhubarb and cut into ¾-inch pieces. Mix with ¼ cup salt, and let stand overnight. In the morning, drain. Put rhubarb, 2 medium-sized chopped onions, 2 tart apples, chopped; 2 tablespoons curry powder, ½ teaspoon cayenne, 3 chili peppers, 1½ cups sugar, 1½ cups vinegar, 1 tablespoon salt in the preserving kettle. Cook gently for 2 hours, stirring occasionally. Cut 4 ounces preserved ginger into small pieces, and cut ½ pounds dates into small pieces. Add ginger and dates to rhubarb mixture after the 2 hours cooking. Add ½ pound sultana raisins and simmer all for 20 minutes longer. Fill hot jars, seal with paraffin and store in dark, cool place. Makes 5 half-pint jars.

Chairman Madame

by Suzanne

A SYMPOSIUM of letters on the coming convention of the American Bar Association in Philadelphia, September 9 to 14, includes one by Beatrice Clephane, of this city. Miss Clephane, who is director of the Legal Aid Bureau, is chairman of the local committee on admissions for the A. B. A. Asked by the A. B. A. Journal to contribute a letter in an informal factual survey of the reasons which lead members to attend the annual meeting of the association, she declared there were as many answers as there are States in the Union.

"Where else can one meet outstanding lawyers from every city and town in the United States and hear them speak with authority on the fields of law in which they specialize?" she writes. "If one doesn't agree with their views, section meetings offer opportunity to present one's own."

About 20 women lawyers of the District plan to attend the convention of the A. B. A. The National Association of Women Lawyers also will have its annual convention there, with headquarters at the St. James Hotel, September 6 to 9.

MISS MAE HELM, who is regional director for the South Mid-Atlantic States, will serve on the reception committee and Mrs. Elisabeth M. Cox, president of the Women's Bar Association of the District, will serve on the banquet committee. Miss Helen Jamison is State vice president for the District.

Local women who will present committee reports at the session of the National Association of Women Lawyers include chairman of the committee on Legal Education, Dean Grace Haws Riley; chairman of the committee on international relations, Miss Laura M. Berrien; chairman of the committee on uniform marriage and divorce, Miss Rebecca L. Blaine; chairman of the committee on equal rights, Miss Helen McGerr.

The Junior Bar Section of the American Bar Association will meet in Philadelphia September 9-10. Mrs. Mildred Gott Bryan, its only woman committee chairman and a local woman lawyer, will report regarding the activities of the committee on restatement of the law. Mrs. Helen Prentiss Culhane is chairman of the local committee working on annotations for the restatement of the law of trusts. Miss Helen Goodner is chairman of the local committee on procedural reform.

At the meeting of the Section of International and Comparative Law on September 9, Miss Catherine L. Vaux, of this city, chairman of the committee on comparative law relating to the judicial status of women, will make a report.

Other local women serving on American Bar Association committees include Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, chairman of the standing committee on aeronautical law; Miss Clephane, chairman of the local committee on admissions; Miss Clara Borjes, member of the international law committee on territorial limits of jurisdiction; Miss Mary Agnes Brown, member of the committee on facilities of the Law Library of Congress, and Miss Annabel Matthews, member of the committee on international double taxation.

In addition to the local women lawyers previously mentioned, the registration lists include the names of Judge Ellen K. Raedy, Miss Mary M. Connelly, Miss Elizabeth Franzoni, Miss Grace Kincare, Miss Jane Herrity, Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, Miss Marguerite Rawalt, Miss Mary Jane Raymond, Mrs. Irene Kennedy, Miss Catherine Stafford, Miss Marion Poole, Miss Marie Scanlon, Miss Kathleen Dugan.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Regis Noel gave a reception for all local lawyers attending this meeting on August 19, with Mrs. Jean Horwitz, of the Women's Bar Association, assisting with arrangements.

Noted Dutch Cartoonist Enraptures Guests at Netherlands Legation

Louis Raemaekers, Whose Illustrations In World War Were Said to Be Worth An Army to Allies, Guest at Dinner

A SLIGHT, sandy-haired man, with a neat mustache and the hint of a goatee centered attention last evening at a dinner given in his honor at the Netherlands Legation.

He is Louis Raemaekers, noted Dutch cartoonist, whose trenchant illustrations during the World War were said to be worth an army corps to the Allies. Accompanied by Mme. Raemaekers, he came to town yesterday to see the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon. The visitors are staying at the Shoreham.

Hope Ridings Miller

About a hundred guests gathered at the Netherlands Legation to enjoy the party, and to talk with the guest of honor and his charming wife. Receiving in the drawing room, Mme. Loudon wore a becoming jacket frock of pink crepe, cut on simple lines, and accented with touches of blue. Mme. Raemaekers wore black, trimmed in pink.

The long buffet table centered the dining room. Guests, after serving themselves, found places at small tables set up in the garden. An air of informality in keeping with the season was maintained throughout the evening.

In the company were representatives of the State Department, the press, several members of the legation staff and a scattering of residential Washingtonians. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, the latter smartly turned out in a pale pink frock; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., Ray Atherton, Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis, the latter wearing an ice blue frock that contrasted nicely with her silver hair, and Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse.

George Abell, just back by plane from Mexico, was telling friends he never realized before how thrilling it could be to leave that country's capital one day and be in Washington the next.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Morgan were glimpsed in the crowd; as were Joe Alsop, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warner, Mr. and Mrs. Phelps Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Lewis, jr., Harold Hinton, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waldrop, Arthur Krock, Mr. and Mrs. Ben McKelway, and many others.

Convictions Put Into Illustrations

In the round of talk following the dinner it was revealed that M. Raemaekers is firmly convinced that "it can happen here" and that the menace of "Deutschland Ueber Alles" is more to be feared than ever before. That's why he is once more turning his talent toward driving the lesson home.

As he sees it, the German people have always believed they were destined to conquer the world. Ten years before World War I he was preaching this sermon to his countrymen. Far too frequently it fell on deaf ears. After the conflict began, he started translating his convictions into illustrations, and before he knew it they were attracting much attention.

One of his most eloquent cartoons portrayed Belgium in an iron cage and Holland, sword in hand, proclaiming, "Your grief is my grief, and your future is my future."

Recent turns of the tide have proved Mr. Raemaekers a prophet, but he wishes with all his heart that the prediction had been an idle fancy. "Unfortunately, it has all come true," he said, "but in a much more terrible way than I could ever imagine."

Over 70, but He Could Pass for 50

He sees a ray of hope, however, in the fact that America finally is awaking to its danger and is aware that the enemy within is as much to be feared as the enemy without. "You are beginning to realize that you can expect Fifth Column activity anywhere and everywhere," he said. "We had our eyes opened at home when our own troops were machine gunned from homes belonging to some of our most highly respected citizens."

By the books, Mr. Raemaekers is over 70. He could pass for 50, without a struggle, and he looked even younger than that as dinner guests gathered around to talk to him last evening. His record, of course, was a familiar story to most of them. Everybody by now should know the facts of his life and that back in the 1900's he gave up a job as professor of art in the small Dutch City of Wageningen and started doing the cartoons that interpreted his ideas of German ambitions.

His knowledge of Prussian psychology and purpose did not come second hand. Born in the Dutch Province of Limburg, only an hour from the German frontier, he was closely associated with German people for 20 years. "And I noted that sooner or later their real sentiments invariably cropped out," he said, "In other words, I heard them sing—far too often—"Deutschland, Deutschland Ueber Alles—Ueber Alles in der Weld" (Over All Things in the World).

Pettengills Entertain Aboard Yacht

Gay Group on Admiral's Barge Hear Concert

When you have to dig out your woolens for a summer night in Washington, that's news, but it was so cool on Wednesday at the yachting party given by Rear Admiral and Mrs. George T. Pettengill that the ladies on the party did just that before climbing on board.

All the guests met at the Navy Yard late in the afternoon and went aboard the yacht, which, though streamlined, is known technically as the "admiral's barge." They motored up the Potomac, where supper was served under the stars, and then came down to the Water Gate, where they anchored and listened to the symphony concert.

With the shortage of women which characterizes a Washington summer, there were many more bachelors in the group. Besides Mrs. Pettengill, the only women were Mrs. George Pulver and Mrs. Thomas R. Cowell. The bachelors included Ralph Hill, Clarence Hewes, Fred Roy and Alfons Landa. Mr. Landa took one of the new stratosphere planes to California last Tuesday and was back here again for work on Friday morning.

Mr. Hill leased his new home in Bar Harbor, but will leave shortly for a vacation there with Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Langhorne, of Washington.

Be Attractive but Not Distracting Is Their Suggestion

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor

WHAT do college men think of girls' clothes? Do they really approve those dozens of sweater and skirt combinations girls tote off to campus with them? Do the males of the species like those saddle oxfords and that string of pearls? What do they feel deep down about evening clothes—do they like them dreamy and romantic, or the slinky kind?

Gifford Rossi

To all of these questions, pertinent to the girl off to her first year of college life, first hand answers were volunteered by college men yesterday at a collegiate fashion show in the little theater of a local store. Ringleader of these fearless fellows was Gifford Rossi, late of Oxford, the University of Lausanne, the University of Zurich and before that of Choate.

Rossi voiced the opinion of the other five college men who acted as a college advisory board on the 100 or more garments modeled by local college girls at the style show. The consensus was that the following clothes should be listed as campus evils and wiped off the "must buy" list of prospective co-eds.

Saddles Are Booted

Saddle oxfords. They aren't flattering, always look soiled and are almost as ugly as wedges. Down with bumpy knees and stockingless legs. Baggy sweaters and skirts, especially those that reveal too much or nothing, and those Brooks ones that look big enough to house a couple of co-eds. The same goes for sloppy skirts. In other words, no more affected shagginess.

Curses on stringy, blowsy or uncombed hair in the classroom. Also on that pale, unwashed, unpowdered face. Even worse, too much make-up in the classroom; worse yet, making-up under the prof's nose while he's trying to inject knowledge.

No more completely Jezebel evening gowns with no support from beneath. Nice girls don't tumble straight from their boudoirs onto a dance floor.

Quiet But Nice

But nice girls do wear dark uniform suits to Oxford, according to Rossi, and what is worse, are forced to wear black cotton or wool hose on the campus, so as not to "distract" the students. At least our co-eds are spared that, so there's hope.

Really a lot of hope, according to spokesman Rossi, for here are the features college men like about college women.

They like that little dash of originality which often goes into their gadgets or belts or scarves. They like trim casual felt hats, polo coats, reversibles, bright wool dresses, plaids on girls with figures for them, a genuine casualness of the mind about clothes which fits so correctly into a man's attitude toward the campus, and simple, dramatic, flowing lines on formal gowns that will floor a stag line any time the girl is lucky enough to have a lovely figure underneath that gown.

College Men Prefer—

Casual but neat girls like Betty Honicon, of Arlington Hall, above, one of the local college girls who modeled in a fashion show yesterday and Wednesday, judged by a jury of college men. The "college counsellors," who vetoed certain campus classics and admired others, included Virgil Elliot, of Georgetown University; Lloyd Osborn, of the University of Michigan; Harry Feeham, of Brown; Lindsay Pharas, of David and Elkins, and "Head Man" Gifford Rossi, of Oxford University.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Back-to-Nature Colors

IF YOU are beginning to plan your fall wardrobe, you will be glad to hear that the clever color affiliates are back again with a whole new series of matched and harmonized accessories.

One widely known beauty expert has created a special color affiliates make-up. Called "Cinnabar," it is a deep red with a faintly brown cast and looks equally well on blonde, brunette and redhead—with all colors. The set of lipstick, nail polish and eye shadow comes in its own attractive package, striped in the six affiliated colors.

The color names are appropriately in the back-to-nature mood; bark brown is subdued and handsome; junior green is deep and foresty; Indian summer is a ripe russet hue; huckleberry, a frosty purple; night-flight blue, an autumn navy, and scarecrow gray is dark and slate-like.

With such a palette to pick from, blending possibilities are endless, for all the colors are in perfect harmony with one another. If one is so minded, two or three may be combined in one ensemble for a particularly chic effect. So this fall will see a new "affiliated" you, perfectly ensembled from head to toe for manufacturers of shoes, silks, rayons, hats, bags, gloves are all planned and dyed to match exactly.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Women Rally to Defense of Suburban Newcomer Whose Neighbors Criticize Her Actions, Her Child

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have just read the letters from "Beth" and "Suburbanite" in your column of August 19. How terribly sorry I feel for the community newcomer (Beth) who finds herself located in the midst of such stand-offish neighbors as "Suburbanite" and her group! The idea of "Suburbanite" complaining because "Beth" calls her son when she wants him, instead of chasing all over the neighborhood looking for him!

I, too, have a little boy. And believe me, when I want him, I go to the door and call. All my neighbors do the same and I have yet to meet a nicer group of women than they are. What if "Beth" did borrow some sugar one day. Haven't any of these snobbish suburbanites ever had to borrow an egg or an onion once in a while? I have, and so have my neighbors. It's really a lot of fun being as friendly as that.

Being friendly and sweet to a newcomer is such a little thing for a woman to do. But oh, how much it means to the lonely stranger. Sincerely, A. U. G.

It's Pleasant to Be On 'Borrowing Terms'

DEAR A. U. G.: I agree with you that there is something decidedly heart warming, to the average housewife, about being on "borrowing" terms with her neighbors. The realization of this fact was forcibly brought home to me a few years ago, when I had left the office early one day to preside at a very small birthday party for my then very small daughter.

An older woman who is a dear friend, and who has lived for decades in a "small closely knit community in Virginia," (even as "Suburbanite" and her neighbors), had insisted on providing the cake for the occasion. So of course she was there and she lingered later. I was living in one of the city's more stately departments at the time. Occupants of the building were, for the most part, rather reserved and formal persons.

Near the dinner hour, my door bell rang and a neighbor's maid hesitated on the threshold. "Mrs. So-and-So, in apartment 98,—(let us say, though that was not the number),—wants to know if she can borrow two eggs," said the maid. Eggs were promptly supplied and I turned to find my suburban guest all radiant approval. "Now isn't it nice that you-all are so friendly, living in a building amongst strangers like this," she said. And while I hadn't thought of that angle before, it immediately dawned on me what a cozy arrangement it was indeed, that one neighbor should feel free to turn to another in a minor domestic emergency. M. H.

How Could Critics Be So Unguarded?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I've been debating all day w hether to send you a letter endorsing your reply of August 16 to "Suburbanite," who is full of complaints against her new neighbor. Finally, I've decided you deserve it. It is hard to believe that "Suburbanit" and her friends could be so unkind or unguarded as to write a letter of that nature without disguising the identities of the principles.

They refer to the newcomer's son as an "infant terrible." As mothers themselves, they should understand that no two children are alike, and that their own child rearing method would not necessarily apply tothe neighbor's child. Some children are hard to manage, no matter who manages them or how. I've had "problem neighbors," too, but I've never seen them so bad they couldn't be worse.

If "Suburbanite" got a drunkard father next door, with eight unruly youngsters, or a rowdy couple who gave noisy parties all hours of the night, then she might have something worth complaining about. But to return to the subject of troublesome children—My 3-year-old son isn't spoiled; he is disciplined according to the rules of "the book" and common sense, and yet he continues to pull up the neighbors' flowers, to throw rocks, etc. And he pursues his pranks in spite of punishment.

My neighbors try to be reasonable about it, and have supplied me with all sorts of advice, which I accept in good part (but, frankly, I can't see that their offspring are altogether perfect). Your remarks to "Suburbanite" were entirely in order, and you might have suggested that she give more attention to the beam in her own eye, and less to the mote in her neighbor's. Well, I must sign off, as I have work to do before my husband gets home. Sincerely, SYMPATHEIC HOUSEWIFE.

Snooty Neighbors Made Their Lives a Nightmare

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Newspaper Man's" indorsement of your column expresses my views. I truly appreciated your article of August 16, in which you verbally spanked a group of suburban housewives for their hostile attitude toward their new neighbor. It so happens that we moved to a new neighborhood five years ago. We were the first new blood to come into the community in 20 years, the vicinity being populated by families all of whom seem to be related by marriage.

Our life here has been a hell on earth. Our children are all honor students. The brightest of the lot, who got straight A's all through high school, was so miserably lonely here that she finally left home and this school. So may God bless your efforts to broaden the understanding of the "old settlers" of that other community. I wish articles of the sort could be printed a dozen times each month. Sincerely, MRS. M. B.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

Several rush weddings have occurred among Truthtown socialites this week as a result of the agitation over the selective service bill.

Larry Lavender, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucretius Lavender, and Miss Angelica Nottbright, turtle soup heiress, were married Tuesday. The fact that the bride's fortune is so tied up that she receives only $5,000 a month is expected to make her eligible for claiming dependency should Mr. Lavender be called to service.

Another hurry-up wedding was that of Sonny Boy Snark and Daphne Van Tinsel, glamour deb. Sonny Boy, who has recently devoted his time to polo, is going to become a dirt farmer in order that he may be engaged in a gainful occupation in event of a call to the colors. He has purchased a Maryland estate and is now looking for a manager, a horticulturist, a horse breeder and several gardeners.

The Thistlewaite Tooners, who were on the verge of divorce over Booby's failure to get more than a two-week vacation from his duties in the Glacier National Bank, are said to have reconciled their differences in view of the pending conscription legislation.

J. Hollingsworth Dripp, outstanding gourmet and man about town, is reported to have decided to give up his gay career and marry and settle down. He is said to be investigating the fortunes of two socialite divorcees and several glamour debs of last season.

Mrs. Waterbury Busk and Mrs. Nylon Busk, former wives of Bodenheim Busk, strolling together in earnest conversation . . . Mrs. Mortimer Percheron being photographed in her ballerina swim suit . . . Mrs. Thornberry Flits monopolizing the divingboard as the photographers approached. . . . Mrs. Knipton Brash in a new shiny sapphire lastex suit not yet adjusted to her sun tan, especially in the region just below her shorts . . . Miss Eloise Gilderlyly in a halter suit, giving the turtle neck effect in posture. . . . Arbuthnot Abercrombie lying on the beach appraising the bathers . . . Mrs. Ethelbert Vanderpuffer, who has not yet completed her reducing, wearing a shiny form fitting pink laxtex suit and reluctantly (?) posing for photographers.

Mrs. Ainsworth Swaggarton flew here from Clamport yesterday to officiate at the opening of the Outdoor Exhibition of Contemporary Jello Modeling. She will return to Clamport today. "While such a trip is rather trying," said Mrs. Swaggerton, "yet I feel that at times like this one should be prepared to make personal sacrifices for the public good."

Girl's Knees Tell Character, Prinz Asserts

Dance Director Believes System Beats Palmistry

By Ida Jean Kain

Some men take great stock in analyzing the set of a girl's mouth, the shape of her hands, or even her handwriting as an index to her disposition. But LeRoy Prinz, Paramount dance director, says to take her swimming and get a look at her knees!

The knees, so declares Prinz, tell whether she is sweet or snappish; smart or lazy. And he has worked out a system that is as exact as fortune telling.

Your Knees-O-Scope

Long knees denote affection and constancy.

Firm knees—obstinacy.

Round knees—artistic temperament and talent.

Fleshy knees—laziness and carelessness.

Knees that point outward—clumsiness.

Plump knees—an amenable disposition.

"Hard" knees—that is, knees that appear sharp when the muscles are tautened—quarrelsomeness.

Besides the knees, a girl's walk tells quite a lot, the dance director observes. A firm stride, with legs swung from the hips, indicates self-confidence; short steps or mincing, hesitating steps indicate self-consciousness. And we might add that if the lady toes out to a marked degree it is fairly certain she has a bad disposition—because she is breaking down her arches. Also, more than likely, she is knock-kneed.

In our experience, a girl either has pretty, dimpled knees or she hasn't—and prayer is no help. But a walk is something that can be fixed. It will pay you to learn to walk beautifully. Pointing the toes straight ahead not only gives you stronger arches but rotates the knees outward, as they should be. Swinging the legs from the hips cuts down on knee action and jerkiness. Use the hips as a unit when you walk—not as two sections. And walk with the feet in as straight a line as possible to keep the hips from swaying.

Two Schools of Thought

In transferring the weight from one foot to the other, begin the transfer with the forward movement from the hip. Don't shift the weight suddenly or you will come down with a pounding step. There are two schools of thought as to whether you should come down first on the heel or first on the ball of the foot. To my mind, the most graceful step is the one in which the heel just slightly precedes the ball of the foot. The step should be: Firm, glide; firm, glide.

A WOMAN'S WASHINGTON

By JEAN BROWNELL

June E. Wilcoxon's Career Proves That Secretary's Job Can Be Stepping Stone

JUNE E. WILCOXON'S career proves that a secretarial job can lead to bigger and better things. Five years ago she went to work for Harry Baker, manager of the Wilson Line. Within two years she had become so familiar with the operations of the line and the organizations with which it deals that she was named passenger representative. She believes she's the only woman in the country to serve a steamship line in that capacity.

JUNE WILCOXON

Her busiest season is winter, when State societies and business organizations begin booking trips for the following summer. So far she already has assigned about 18 dates for the 1941 season. Her job involves many a minor headache. There are the mothers who telephone her just as one of the "kiddies' trips" is about to start and ask her to make sure that Billy—one of 2,000 passengers—has a handkerchief.

Then there are the situations which arise from the rigid load limitations imposed on the line's excursion boats. When the capacity is reached, those left on the dock have to stay there, no matter who they are. Miss Wilcoxon once had a hard time making this clear to Nathan Straus, administrator of the United States Housing Authority, who had to be left behind when the Housing Authority went on a river outing.

Her biggest job—and biggest triumph—was arranging for 25,000 Boy Scouts to make the Mount Vernon trip during the 1937 Jamboree here. It took a week, but all 25,000 made the trip and not so much as a scratch or a cut finger was reported.

THE WEATHER—On one of those afternoons when the mercury was up to 99, six youngsters gifted with a fiendish sense of humor lighted a bonfire in Lafayette Square and hovered around it, rubbing their hands.

A soft-hearted housewife here in town never could bring herself to set a mouse trap. Whenever she found evidence of mice in her kitchen, she'd sit tight and hope they would move next door. Lately, however, she's been boasting of her success in trapping the marauders. Explanation of her change of heart: She didn't mind their eating crumbs, but she thought they were getting a little particular when they started foraging for vitamins in her window boxes.

Ambulance Control Law Recommended by Ruhland

Health Officer's Report Ready For Commissioners

Creation of a centralized ambulance control department under the District Government will be recommended to the Commissioners today by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, it was learned last night.

The health officer's report on the local ambulance service, requested several weeks ago by the Commissioners, will be studied at the regular board meeting.

Improvement of the service, as recommended by Dr. Ruhland, is designed to prevent a recurrence of ambulance delays, which have been noted by the Commissioners.

The commissioners request for a report from the health officer was an outgrowth of the death of William E. Greaves, 62, who was forced to wait nearly an hour for the arrival of an ambulance at the scene of an accident August 2. Five different persons reportedly called the ambulance. He died in Casualty Hospital, four and a half hours after the accident.

Would Operate 24 Hours a Day

The centralized control system would operate on a 24-hour basis and a "dispatcher" would be on hand at all times to take incoming calls for ambulance service and refer these calls to definite units located nearest to the scene.

At present the District has agreements with local hospitals and the health officer believes these can be revised to take care of emergency cases in hospitals which are nearest the scene of accidents.

He does not recommend that a physician necessarily accompany the driver of the ambulance, but does state both the driver and his assistant be trained in first aid.

Health department physicians who care for the poor would be closely integrated to the ambulance service, under the recommendations. At present the department has 14 physicians for the poor.

Time Record on All Calls

A uniform record system for reporting ambulance calls would be instituted, which would show the time the call was received at the hospital or station, the time the ambulance driver left and the time of return. This system, Dr. Ruhland recommends, should be initiated at once.

Dr. Ruhland also suggests that a radio be provided for each ambulance operating in conjunction with the service.

The District at the present time has four emergency ambulance services. These are at Emergency Hospital, Casualty Hospital, Freedmen's Hospital and the District fire department.

Dr. Michelson's Widow to Share $403,131 Estate

Mrs. Katherine H. H. Michelson, widow of Dr. Truman Michelson, formerly one of the country's leading ethnologists, will receive personal effects and a life estate in one-half of the residue of the estate of her sister, Harriette H. H. Woodruff, which was appraised in New York yesterday for transfer tax purposes at $403,131 net, it was learned here last night.

Mrs. Michelson lives at 1710 Q street northwest. A grandnephew of the deceased, Harrison Prindle, of the same address, will receive one-eighth of the legacy in trust. Harriette Woodruff, who died October 22, 1938, made specific cash bequests in her will totaling $1,500.

Before his death in 1938, Dr. Michelson was associated with the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution for 28 years. He and Mrs. Michelson were married in July, 1903.

U. S. Red Cross Cables $10,000 to China

The Red Cross announced yesterday that it had cabled $10,000 to China to be used for the relief of Chinese victims of the aerial bombing of Chungking. The money was transmitted through the State Department to Nelson T. Johnson, ambassador to China and will be spent under his direction.

Bill Gives D. C. Judges Life Appointments

Murdock Offers Plan Benefiting Justices In Lower Courts

Judges of the District Police, Municipal, and Juvenile Courts would be appointed hereafter for life terms or until retirement, under the provisions of a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Murdock (Democrat), of Utah.

The measure was introduced at the request of the District Bar Association, Murdock said, and was referred to the House Judiciary Committee, of which he is a member.

Judges of the three courts would serve during good behavior and be subject to removal by the President for cause. They now are appointed for limited terms.

Any judge who had served on the bench for 12 years or more would be forced to retire at the age of 70 at half-pay and could be called upon for service thereafter not more than three months a year. The purpose of this provision, Murdock explained, is to furnish judges during the summer vacation period.

One section of the bill stipulates that any judge of the three courts who has served continuously in office for 20 years or more on the date of the enactment of the act may retire at half-pay. The President, moreover, would be empowered to reappoint any judge previously retired for retirement purposes so that he may obtain the pension.

Representative Murdock said he did not know whether he would ask the committee to act upon the bill at this session.

"I am not thoroughly sold on it," he said, "but I think it has merit."

Dean Powell Is Considered For Bishopric

Listed as Chicago Possibility; Rejected Louisiana Post

Dean Noble C. Powell of the National Cathedral, who twice refused the bishopric of Louisiana to remain here, is among 41 clergymen under consideration for election as bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago, the Associated Press reported last night.

Informed of the candidates selected by a special committee in Chicago, Cathedral officials said Dean Powell with four or five others listed had a good chance of election at the diocesan convention next month.

In traditional ceremonies, all active and retired Episcopal clergymen in Chicago, and a corresponding number of laymen, will cast ballots for their choice among the 41 picked by the committee.

The nominee must then be approved by all the Episcopal bishops.

The Rev. Powell came here as dean of the cathedral in 1936. He has been noted for his administration of diocesan matters.

Elected Bishop of Louisiana April 12, 1939, and again September 20, 1939, he refused both times. The dean said he felt he had not served long enough at the cathedral to accomplish the administrative work he was called here to perform.

Drugstore Label Somewhat Mixed

It's about time the label was changed on a carving of the Lincoln Memorial on display in the show window of a downtown drugstore. The card for six weeks has read:

"The birthplace of George Washington, Mount Vernon."

Legion Holds Mothers 'Prey Of 5th Column'

D. C. Department Hits at Draft Foes; Differs With Kelly

Mothers opposing the conscription bill were labeled "prey of Fifth Columnists" last night as the District Department of the American Legion adopted a resolution demanding immediate passage of a selective service act and named a five-man committee to coordinate Legion efforts in this direction.

The resolution was designed to register the local legion's disapproval of recent remarks by National Commander Ray Kelly, who has expressed opposition to conscription in peacetime.

Kelly's stand was not mentioned in the resolution introduced jointly at a meeting of the executive board of the District Legion by Past Commanders Julius I. Peyser and Harlan Wood. A last paragraph in the original resolution suggesting cooperation with other patriotic bodies in supporting conscription legislation was amended at the objection of several members.

Lashes at Objections

In the history of this country "this is the hour of greatest need," said Past Commander Peyser as he introduced his resolution.

Peyser lashed at men who would "enjoy the liberties of this country and yet shy at military service." He declared mothers fighting the legislation were unsuspecting victims of "insidious propaganda."

Every one of these mothers, he said, is a "potential Fifth Columnist."

Later the woman anti-conscription groups were described by Raymond W. Queenin, commander of Vincent Costello Post, No. 15, as "those dizzy dames" crowding the Capitol galleries. They were being led, Queenin said, by "Fifth Columnists and Communists."

Peace Rally Denounced

The meeting was frequently interrupted, much to the annoyance of the members, by the commotion of half a dozen painters on scaffolds who were painting the ceiling of the District Building board room, where the meeting was being held. At one time the scaffolding nearly toppled sending members scrambling to the opposite side of the room.

Other speakers attacked a recent rally of the Washington Peace Mobilization group in the National Press Club as a "disgraceful spectacle," in view of the country's present "crisis."

The resolution indorsing selective training declared, in part, that this "is the most democratic method of achieving the needed defense of our Nation."

Capital News In Brief

Huge Derrick Ties Up Mid-Town Traffic

Like some prehistoric monster, a gigantic construction derrick moved at snail's pace along P street, backing up traffic for several blocks shortly after the dinner hour last night.

At Twenty-seventh street all forward motion stopped as the monster machine attempted to negotiate a left turn, finally managed it after running over a brick sidewalk, with considerable damage to the walk.

At Q street the machine was maneuvered for another turn, this time blocking traffic for 25 minutes.

Before the derrick reached destination, police estimated, traffic in the neighborhood was subjected to about an hour's delay.

Smithsonian Adds To Data on U. S. Birds

The life histories of a group of birds familiar to man, but relatively unstudied, have been compiled in a new bulletin issued by the Smithsonian Institution.

Included in the vaguely related group are the North American cuckoos, roatsuckers, hummingbirds, the whippoorwill and the chimney swift. The bulletin was compiled by Arthur Cleveland Bent, of Taunton, Mass., and is the thirteenth volume of a series on North American birds to be published by the Smithsonian.

Alcohol Board's Phones Are Spoiled by Water

Heavy rains have so clogged telephone cables in the District Building the offices of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board have been without outside communication for days.

The three members of the board have been away anyway, in case you called them and were told the lines were out of order. The cables must dry out before service can be restored.

Representation Revival Fails

King Subcommittee Waits House Action On Sumners Bill

Last rites for District national representation legislation at this session of Congress were performed in the Senate yesterday as a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee decided informally to continue to await House action.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, after conferring with his colleagues on the subcommittee, said that the Senators had decided not to try to revive the legislation, as it had originated in the House.

Cool to Self-Rule

Meanwhile, Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee showed little inclination to bring out a home-rule resolution at this time despite a suggestion that the committee be called from Representative Kennedy (Democrat), Maryland.

Randolph expressed a hope that the Sumners resolution could be resurrected and suggested that it should have priority. House parliamentarians pointed out that the measure could be brought to a vote in the House only by a discharge petition signed by 218 members and that this could not be circulated for seven days after a resolution proposing a rule is introduced.

House leaders were emphatic in their prediction that the national representation resolution could not be passed in the House without the support of the Rules Committee.

Finch Thanks Randolph

Wilbur S. Finch, president of the District Suffrage Association, wrote a letter to Chairman Randolph yesterday thanking him for his "magnificent efforts" in behalf of the resolution.

At the same time, he pointed out that the way had been cleared for District Committee consideration of a measure giving the District self-government.

"While there may be some highly technical objections to the granting of national representation," he said, "there is and can be none for local self-government . . .

"It would be a pity if the wonderful support pledged to the movement for District suffrage by both Democrats and Republicans should go for naught because of the technical difficulties encountered in the Rules Committee."

Funds Asked To Speed Up D. C. Traffic

Highway Budget Requests $4,353,540; Bottlenecks May Go

One of Washington's worst traffic bottlenecks, Fourteenth street and Maine avenue southwest, would be eliminated under the street highway improvement program submitted yesterday by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst in 1942 budget estimates totaling $4,353,540.

Death-Car Driver Begins Jail Term For Bad Brakes

Lawrence Miles, colored, 36, began a 120-day jail term last night for traffic law violations growing out of an accident last Sunday which killed 2-year-old Larry Newcomer, of 63 K street northeast.

Although he was exonerated by a coroner's jury Wednesday of responsibility in the death, Niles was sentenced by Judge George D. Neilson on charges of having no permit and bad brakes.

Miles, who lives at 1006 First street northwest, pleaded guilty to both counts.

"This defendant was driving a vehicle, which he had no right to do," the judge declared. "Had he not been, the child would be alive today."

Policeman Hurt Arresting Drunk

Policeman R. E. Lane, of Administrative Headquarters, suffered a broken leg last night in a scuffle with an inebriate who resisted arrest in a tavern in the 3400 block of Fourteenth street northwest. He was the fourth policeman injured while attempting to arrest lawbreakers in the past month.

Private Lane, an A. B. C. Board inspector, took the man in charge when he refused to leave the tavern. Resisting arrest, the latter fell on Lane's leg, broken once before, again fracturing it.

Lane's partner, Private T. Fason, took the man to Tenth Precinct station.

Liquor Code Revision Hearing Set

New Regulations, Amendments To Be Aired At 10 A. M. Monday

Revision of the District's liquor code, under fire for more than a year, will be the subject of another public hearing Monday at 10 a. m. in the board room of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Although this hearing conflicts with the hearing on the District's new budget estimates, officials of the ABC Board yesterday decided to proceed anyway. Commissioner David McCoach, jr., said it was "unfortunate."

All told, the proposed changes in the code contain seven new regulations and amendments to ten existing regulations.

A class A or class B license could not be issued to any person whose establishment is 600 feet from any public, private or parochial school or any college, university or church or any religious institution having a congregation, residence or student body of 50 or more persons, or any playground, recreation center or athletic field under the revised regulations. Class A licenses permit the off-sale (taken off the premises for consumption) of package liquor, and class B permits the off-sale of beer. This would not affect present licensees, however.

Proximity of a license applicant's establishment to a church or school has caused a majority of protests at the liquor hearings.

The new regulations proposed by the board, but not necessarily with its indorsement, follow:

Permission to wholesalers to file with the board copies of contracts with retailers, relating to sale price or resale price of any beverage, which would be open to inspection by interested parties. No licensee could violate any of the minimum resale price provisions of contract. This regulation is designed to hit alleged unfair trade practices among the Class A dealers.

Combination stores, both A and B, would provide separate beverage departments which would be locked during hours when liquor could not be sold.

Retail class C (sale on premise of liquor and beer) and class D (sale on premises of beer and light wines) licensees shall maintain premise in clean, sanitary and orderly condition.

Signs advertising liquor would be restricted to 10 square feet in size. No illuminated signs on Sunday or any other time when sale is forbidden. Signs now in violation of proposed regulations, if approved, would have to be removed within 90 days of approval. Blinker lights would be prohibited.

Complete description of all personnel of licensees within 30 days of approval to be furnished the board.

The proposed new time restrictions where sale is permitted follow:

Beer or liquor could not be sold between the hours of midnight Sunday and 8 a. m. Monday, in off-sale establishments.

Bottled beer or package liquor could be sold by off-sale licensees between 8 a. m. and 10 p. m., on week-days, but these licensees could sell their products between 8 a. m. Saturday and 12 midnight.

Restaurants and night clubs having Class C or D licenses could sell between Saturday midnight and 9 a. m. Sunday.

All types of liquor sales prohibited from 2 a. m. to 2 p. m. Sunday.

Light wines and beer may be sold in Class C and D establishments from 2 p. m. to midnight Sunday.

Miniatures, which are now barred from sale in the District, would be outlawed by an amendment, and the use of Santa Claus pictures or any religious figures in connection with liquor advertisements would be banned.

'Lucky Partners' Another In Comic Vein at Keith's

Ronald Colman and Ginger Rogers Prove Adroit Costars in a Whimsy Adapted From Original Story by Sacha Guitry

"LUCKY PARTNERS." RKO-Radio picturization of the story, "Bonne Chance," by Sacha Guitry, adapted to the screen by Alan Scott and John van Druten, costarring Ronald Colman and Ginger Rogers, With Jack Carson, Spring Byington, Cecilia Loftus, Hugh O'Connell, Brandon Tynan, Leon Belasco, Edward Conrad, Walter Kingsford, Lucile Gleason and Helen Lynd. Directed by Lewis Milstone. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

THREE FACTORS enter into the creation of such unique qualities as "Lucky Partners" possesses. The first is that it stems from a story by Sacha Guitry, retailored to American taste; the second, that it has been adapted to the uses of the camera with exceptional skill by Alan Scott and John van Druten, noted playwright on his own account; the third, that it is interpreted with rare understanding and finesse by Ronald Colman and Ginger Rogers, its costars.

BELL

To be revealed for the first time in Washington on the screen at RKO-Keith's this morning, "Lucky Partners" is one of the few films of recent vintage that seems to apprehend that silence and pantomime, at times, are more eloquent than pointlessly tumbling dialogue. There are many important scenes in the picture that are wordless; some, even, in which not so much as a note of musical background is heard. This is as refreshing an innovation to the audience as it is a severe test of the capabilities of the players.

It is a spicy yarn that Guitry traced on the keys of his typewriter. The adaptors have lost little of its pungency in translating it to the American screen and yet have remained always on the safe side of propriety. Situations and speeches, now and again, are a little on the "salty" side, but none is offensive to a liberal and sophisticated sense of comedy. This is not to say that "Lucky Partners" is continuously and unfailingly hilarious. It is, nevertheless, pretty consistently subtle and suspenseful.

The two pivotal characters are a gifted young artist, hiding out from his public by reason of an earlier involvement with the law, and a happy-go-lucky, engaged young woman, with an addiction to sweepstakes tickets. The two go into partnership in the purchase of a bit of the contraband, with the proviso—agreed to by both the girl and her fiance—that should they win, they will take a purely "impersonal," brother-and-sister trip together prior to the marriage. This is a little hard for Freddie to take, upon mature consideration, so he follows them to Niagara Falls and precipitates a succession of most unusual complications in the lives of all three. On charges that are something less than air-tight, the whole merry business eventually finds itself in court, with each defendant acting as his or her own legal counsel. As we have said in a previous column, there is something of the flavor of "My Favorite Wife" in all this—not so persistently amusing, but equally deft in its plot manipulations, climax and denouement.

In the role of the masquerading artist, Ronald Colman offers another of his impeccable comedy performances, never forgetting that he is a gentleman and always lending adding effectiveness to the most flippant of his scenes by the seriousness of his playing. Ginger Rogers, in the opposite role, demonstrates once more that she is a comedienne in the ascendant, without need of tricky tap-dance sequences to lend impressiveness to her work. I would not be sure that this is the perfect teaming of talents, but it is one sufficiently well attuned to rise high above the mediocre.

With two exceptions, the supporting cast is completely secondary to the conniving principals. Jack Carson gives an especially good account of himself in the role of the abashed groom-to-be (he hopes) and Harry Davenport makes something rather special of the role of the judge in the final courtroom scene. Judge Davenport is wholly captivated by Artist David's whimsical estimate of conventional social usages and has himself quite a time presiding over the bizarre trial. The others, though individually competent enough, do not much matter. Hugh O'Connell is an exceedingly droll and "understanding" hotel clerk; Spring Byington, a fluttery romanticist, who is repeatedly disappointed, and Cecilia Loftus scarcely more than a "bit" player. Even so, it all adds up rather well.

The supplementary attractions on the new Keith bill concede prime interest to the major attraction. The combined Pathe and Universal newsreels recapitulate the important happenings of the week, as usual, and Walt Disney Technicolors "Donald's Vacation" as the only other subsidiary to add sparkle to a bill dedicated to comedy.

Again Becomes Suave Comedian

RONALD COLMAN

costarred for the first time with Ginger Rogers, in "Lucky Partners," opening this morning on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. The story is a slightly daring one, based on the pleasurable possibilities of a winning sweepstakes ticket—which, in this instance, doesn't win, except in a roundabout sort of way. At any rate, it all ends in court

Not Up on Cans, Star Cans Cannery

Ann Rutherford has finally "canned" her "white elephant." She has sold her salmon cannery.

Some time ago she was willed the cannery by a relative. Not knowing anything about canning fish, Ann didn't know what to do with it. She has been trying to operate it successfully by long-distance telephone.

But now another cannery firm takes it over.

"And if I never see a salmon again," the M-G-M starlet says, "that will be too soon."

Make-up Men Can't Top Bracken 'Mop'

Hollywood make-up experts, who have succeeded in shifting Charles Laughton's paunch to the top of his back, and once made a slant-eyed celestial of Akim Tamiroff, today confessed themselves bested by nature in the concoction of a "fright" wig.

Eddie Bracken, Broadway's comedian now making his film debut as the dim-witted Dizzy in Jackie Cooper's new Aldrich Family film, "Life With Henry," for Paramount, is the lad whose natural hirsute growth defies all effort of the make-up men to improve on it. It is one vast cowlick.

The Great WALT DISNEY FESTIVAL OF HITS! 5 BIG HITS IN ONE SHOW

Warner Bros. Cool METROPOLITAN

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

They've talked for years about Hollywood being the fashion center of the world, but not till Paris fell would New York big shots or fashion editors cooperate. Now every plane brings another batch to find out what we're doing this year. Last week, Adrian, Travis Banton, and Edith Head were interviewed by five of the most important ones, which couldn't be more amusing. Everyone knows the power of the screen. If fans like a dress on any star, it could be copied next day. But designers have been a bit jealous of that power. Now, when they've nowhere else to go, Hollywood welcomes them.

HOPPER

"The Great Profile," with Jack Barrymore, was a riot, only I didn't get enough Barrymore. Jack's started something. Every player should see it, and somewhere in each picture, put in a sly caricature of him or herself—just to keep up his own morale and sense of balance. What an actor that guy is—Wow!

Coward's plays, "Tonight at 8:30," will be kept on another three weeks, after which Charles Boyer and Vivien Leigh will do the French play "Melo," to be followed by Charlot's Revue, and English stars will toe-and-heel it in the best chorus manner.

There's been so much written about the actors' children from the English orphanage, I'd like to get in my two cents' worth. Why not take them to Nassau, Canada, or Australia, keep them together as a group, instead of putting them into homes in Hollywood? No one knows what he's going to be able to afford a year from now. None of us may be working—then the children would be worse off then they are now.

After watching Judy Garland play a scene with her father, Charles Winninger (who had been eating oatmeal for four hours and still likes it), in "Little Nellie Kelly," I made up my mind all over again that Judy is the most valuable star on the Metro lot. I'd like to see the company do something out of the ordinary with her.

Geraldine Fitzgerald has played nothing but sweet maidens in four pictures. Now for a change, she's playing a nasty wench opposite George Raft in "South of Suez."

Jack Oakie says, "There are three menaces to safe driving in America today—hie, hike, and hug."

Peter Lorre tells the one about the optimist who fell from the top of a skyscraper and muttered, as he passed the fourth floor, "So far, so good."

Columbia

Duplicating the success of Helen Jerome's play from which it was adapted, "Pride and Prejudice" reopens this morning at the Columbia Theater, beginning a third week on F street just as it enjoys a similar extension in the Radio City Music Hall.

In this affectionate backward glance on another century's courting problems Aldous Huxley and Jane Murfin have had an eye on pleasing the great majority of filmgoers. They have wrought a delightful vehicle for Greer Garson and Laurence Olivier, have fashioned a diverting conversation piece and framed a film that is a push-over for the ladies.

But in popularizing they have also dulled the unexpected pinpricks which make Jane Austen such lively reading. They have turned Mr. Collins into a librarian after his shallow career as a cleric. They have softened the stern Lady Catherine de Bourgh into a well-meaning dame which she definitely was not. And they have been unfortunate enough to have an uninhibited Mary Boland playing Mrs. Bennet, and play that tiresome bore to the ultimate molar is what Miss Boland does. It's a great pity that even now people have to have their Austen diluted.

Still, it's an amusing enough film, if a bit on the long side. Edna May Oliver is superb, until her stupid I-have-seen-the-light conversion, as the volatile Lady Catherine. Miss Garson is as charming as she was in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," while Olivier is an ideal partner for her. Others in the company include Maureen O'Sullivan, Edmund Gwenn, Melville Cooper, Frieda Inescourt, Marsha Hunt, Karen Morley and Heather Angel.

Fan Mail Workers Name Betty Field

Down around the fan mail department at Paramount they're calling Betty Field the "clamor girl."

Betty is the young New York actress who is appearing with Fredric March in John Cromwell's filmization of "Victory."

"Since Betty made her debut a year ago in 'What a Life' and followed it up with 'Of Mice and Men' and 'Seventeen,'" the department reports, "the studio has gotten all kinds of letters asking for more pictures with Betty in them. You never saw such a clamor about one person."

The New Yorker

Pat O'Brien, screen star, is today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons, who is on vacation.

EVERY ACTOR has his favorite character, the role with which he prefers his name to be associated by the historians of stage and screen. Walter Hampden has his "Cyrano," Spencer Tracy his "Father Flannagan," and Raymond Massey his "Lincoln." Mine will always be the role I recently completed at Warner Brothers, that of Notre Dame's "favorite son" in "Knute Rockne—All American."

Pat O'Brien

ROCKNE WAS more than just a football coach. To millions of youngsters and grownups, he was an idol and inspiration. The Norwegian's wholesome philosophy was a stimulating influence in American life, one that we can do well to recall at this time.

FOOTBALL wasn't just a game to Rockne; he read into it a broader significance. He once told a sports writer, "I don't like to lose, and that isn't so much because it's just a football game, but because defeat means the failure to reach your objective." As he put it in his autobiography, "Wellington said that the battle of Waterloo was won on the playing field of Eton. I'm no Wellington; but I firmly believe that America's future battles, in peace or in war, are being won on the gridirons of the country."

ROCKNE LOVED fair play and fine sportsmanship. His favorite story and one that he never failed to tell his teams was about the time Notre Dame's center, O'Donnell, had a broken rib. He was to play against McEwen, of Army, who enjoyed the reputation of being one of the roughest centers in football. As the game began, McEwen walked over to O'Donnell and asked, "Which side is the broken rib on?" O'Donnell pointed to it. There were 60 minutes of hard football, but not once did McEwen or any other Army player touch O'Donnell's broken rib.

LIKE ALL TRULY great men, Rockne had a sense of humor, and there are almost as many Rockne anecdotes as there are about Abe Lincoln. Tex Rickard once asked him why hockey wasn't played at Notre Dame, and Rockne explained that Father O'Donnel refused to sanction the game. Rickard wanted to know why. "Well," said Rockne, "I explained it to him, and he seemed downright interested until we came to the use of sticks. Then he held up his hands and said, 'That game, Knute, is never for this university—Notre Dame will never make the mistake of indorsing any game that puts a cudgel in the hands of an Irishman!'"

ROCKNE WAS extremely fond of the Irish. One of his favorite stories was of the time he was getting ready to hold a practice scrimmage and was unable to find the football. "Where the deuce is that ball I bought this afternoon?" he asked the boys. A new candidate, an enthusiastic young Irishman, shouted, "To heck with the ball. Let's start the game!"

HIS DISCIPLINE was never harsh, but always softened with humor. One of his players, a sophomore, was over-eager to get into a certain game that his sweetheart was watching. He came to Rockne, time after time, and asked to be allowed to go in for at least one play. Rockne told the boy, "I'm saving you." That didn't hold him. Back he came, pleading to get into the game, overlooking the fact that if he had been important to the game, he wouldn't have to apply; also that he was a sophomore with two years of play ahead of him. "I'm saving you," Rockne again told him. In desperation, as he saw the third-string players rush in for the final few minutes, the boy resumed his annoyance. By this time, it became evident to Rockne that the lad needed a quick, clear lesson in deflation. The game ended. Morose, the sophomore trudged by Rockne's side as he left the field. "The game's over," the boy complained. "The season's over. What are you saving me for?" "The Junior Prom," replied Rockne.

ROCKNE WAS a master of psychology. In a game against Princeton, Jim Crowley, one of the Four Horsemen, wasn't up to his usual standard and was outplayed by Princeton's Slagle. In the dressing room between halves, Crowley was apologetic and tried to explain his poor performance to Rockne. "I made a mistake," he said. "I didn't know Slagle was that fast." "That wasn't the mistake you made," squelched Rockne. "The mistake you made was in not letting Slagle know who you were. If you had shown him those newspaper clippings you've been saving, telling how good you were, he wouldn't have dared come near you."

AT ANOTHER TIME, Notre Dame was getting a severe shellacking from Carnegie Tech. By the end of the first half of the game, Carnegie Tech had rolled up a score of 20 to 0. Rockne, abashed by the dispirited playing of his team, gave them time to get settled in their dressing room. Then he opened the door and, poking his head into the room, apologetically chirped, "Oh, excuse me! I thought this was the Notre Dame dressing room!" The boys caught on, and the game ended with a score of 31-20, favor of Notre Dame.

ROCKNE DIDN'T subscribe to the theory that football was just a contest of brute strength and he never pampered players who ignored their studies. "Football," he said, "is not or should not be merely a game for the strong and stupid. It should be a game for the smart, the swift, the brave and the clever boy with brains." Whenever a boy applied to him, Rockne's first question was, "Do you want a college education?" He had no use for boys who were not good students and could not keep up with their classes. His idea was that a good student is a good athlete and always put brains at a premium.

AT A FOOTBALL banquet, Bob Zuppke once got up and said, "That man Rockne is in a class by himself. Everybody is snooping around Notre Dame, trying to find out what he puts in a football besides wind!"

William Powell-Myrna Loy Hit Continues Palace Merriment

By Richard L. Coe

On so delicate a thread as a case of amnesia "I Love You Again" spins into a second week at the Palace this morning, employing William Powell and Myrna Loy in the summer's best-sustained comedy.

In a season which has already included many fine comedies and is planning many more to take our minds off dreary thoughts, "I Love You Again" is outstanding because it lacks those arid moments excusable in most comedies. It's funny from the moment we see William Powell approach a ship's bar and order a ginger ale with grape juice, continuing the unpopularity he has won with his fellow passengers.

Whether the character Powell plays is really a free-living "con" man or a dreary stuffed shirt it would be difficult to say. The point is that a conk on the head has rendered a respectable chap with Boy Ranger on his mind into a gay lover amazed to find that his other self has married a beautiful wife whose boredom has prompted her to divorce him. He spares no ethics in trying to win her back and the effect of his change upsets his neighborly burghers uproariously.

Two Stars at Best

With Powell as this teetotaler turned high-liver, the ridiculous story becomes as plausible as it is funny. Whether watching a drunken Frank McHugh balancing on the railing of a ship, whether leading a group of Boy Rangers to a fake oil field in a Pennsylvania park or simply meeting a wife whom he didn't know existed, Powell is at his best, a vast relief to those of us who've been worried by his rather languid recent appearances.

The ever-fascinating Myrna Loy is a delight, too, as the wife who is so pleasantly surprised by the change in her husband. Again she underplays with that charm and tact so distinctly her own.

Further cause for laughter is Frank McHugh as a somewhat incredulous associate in Powell's heady distraction. His comedy seems more resourceful than in his days as a Warner stock actor. Edmund Lowe makes sport of a tough guy whose mind is on oil, while the supporting cast is mostly concerned with the strange goings-on of the once respectable Mr. Wilson.

It wouldn't be fair to let you in on any of the gags you'll find in "I Love You Again," but simply for suggestion just give a thought to suave Powell tossed about in the woods by a bear trap or to Powell delicately purchasing lingerie for his wife in a store accustomed to his pinch-penny ways.

Of course, it's to Woody Van Dyke's direction that this comedy owes so much of its distinction, sustaining, as we've said, a slight story on a tight-wire of humor.

"Suva, Pride of Fiji," is the Technicolored FitzPatrick travelogue, while an amusing cartoon, "The Bookworm Turns" and Friday's customary new bill of newsreels conclude a Palace offering that's good for solid, sustained laughter.

Single Stage Role Opens Film Career to a Jobless Thespian

By Alexander Kahn

Hollywood, Aug. 21 (U.P.)—Five months ago Laird Cregar was sleeping in the back seat of an automobile because he didn't have the money to rent a room, but today he is costarring with Paul Muni in a picture.

Cregar's tale sounds like a scenario. In fact, if a writer tried to peddle a story half as unusual as that of Cregar's rise, he would be accused of reading too much Horatio Alger and told to curb his imagination.

But Cregar says it's all true and he is almost as bewildered as everyone else.

The huge young actor, only 24, and 6 feet, 3 inches tall, owes his success to a single stage engagement which brought him to the attention of talent scouts and resulted in five offers of film jobs. The stage part was the title role in "Oscar Wilde."

Cregar, his 260-pound frame covered with buckskin for the role of a French trapper in "Hudson's Bay Company," was seated in a canoe with a half-naked Indian when we arrived at the lagoon on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot. Muni was in an adjoining canoe and the prospects of talking to Cregar for several hours were not bright until Muni and his Indian paddler tipped over their little craft. The ducking halted action for a while until Muni could change his clothes.

"Yes," Cregar admitted, "if it were not for 'Oscar Wilde,' I might still be sleeping in the back seat of an automobile and wondering where I would get my next meal. I'll have to claim, however, that 'Oscar' was my own idea and not a role dumped into my lap.

"After six months of enforced idleness, I was desperate. I had read the play and was convinced I could play the title role. So I went from producer to producer with the play until finally I put over the idea with Arthur Hutchinson.

"The West Coast engagement opened in Hollywood and the night after its premiere, the movie offers began coming in. I owed a debt to Hutchinson, however, and I finished the run of the play in San Francisco before I accepted the offer I liked best.

"Although I intend to make my career in pictures, I hope to be able to return to the stage between film engagements. At present I have an offer to appear this fall opposite Helen Hayes in 'Twelfth Night' for the Theater Guild."

Cregar, although of British parentage, is a native of Philadelphia and was educated in England and the United States. His ambition to become an actor goes back to his days in England when at the age of 8 he played a pageboy with the Stratford-on-Avon company.

When he was 14 years old, Cregar had graduated from the Episcopal Academy in Pennsylvania but decided he was too young to go to college. So he convinced the Hedgerow Players, amateur company in Germantown, Pa., that he was an actor and spent several years with them.

In 1938 he won a scholarship to the Pasadena Community Playhouse and came to California, spending two years with the theatrical organization before he returned to Pennsylvania where he appeared in Federal theater projects for a year.

"I came back to Southern California last year," he recalls, "and spent a few months with the Pasadena playhouse. I then made my professional debut in the West Coast run of 'The Great American Family' but that ended in the fall and there I was without a job."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 22 (INS).—Bette Davis, who was so tired after making two pictures in succession—"All This and Heaven Too" and "The Letter"—said, when she left Hollywood, that she wouldn't return until October 1. I reckon she meant what she said at the time; she usually does. But when she does return in the fall she will start work immediately in "January Heights," based on Polan Banks' novel, before she does "The Little Foxes," for Samuel Goldwyn.

PARSONS

I talked with Hal Wallis yesterday and he said that he planned again to team Bette and George Brent, who made history in "Dark Victory." Goodness me! I nearly forgot that George and Bette all but marched to the altar after that movie, for while making the picture with Edmund Goulding (who also directs "January Heights") they actually discovered each other. History won't repeat itself, as far as romance is concerned, for George is now deeply in love with Ann Sheridan and Bette has other romantic ties. But Hal teamed Bette, George and Eddie, believing them to be a money-making combination.

You and you and you—Mr. and Mrs. Fan—can forget "Osborne of Sing Sing," for Mr. Clark Gable faces the cameras Monday in "Comrade X," an original by Ben Hecht and Charles Lederer, and in the opinion, not only of Mr. Gable but his bosses, a much better story for him. He will have the beauteous Hedy Lamarr, who is with him in "Boom Town," as his romantic interest. And that's a break, for Hedy is so beautiful she creates interest in any picture in which she appears. She will not do "Come Live With Me" until later. King Vidor has been selected to direct and Gottfried Reinhardt, who was with Warners for so long, produces this as his initial M-G-M effort.

Dennis Morgan can start smiling again. Warners have decided to loan him to RKO for the lead opposite Ginger Rogers in "Kitty Foyle," instead of keeping him on the home lot to replace George Raft in "South of Suez." Dennis was so disappointed at the thought of missing his big chance in "Kitty Foyle" that Hal Wallis didn't have the heart to stand in his way. So "South of Suez" has been temporarily shelved. Raft, because of his refusal to do the film, has been placed under suspension. As for "Kitty Foyle," it goes before the cameras Monday and I am delighted to hear that Gladys Cooper, one of England's finest actresses, plays Ginger's mother. Miss Cooper was Max de Winter's sister in "Rebecca," and last week made a hit with local theatergoers in "The Astonished Heart," one of Noel Coward's plays.

Comes the annual debate over whether studios should or should not permit visitors on the set. Universal put the ban down a few days ago and Para and RKO did it early. Really, this is one of Hollywood's biggest headaches. There's no doubt that the studios appreciate the interest of visitors, realizing they carry away a feeling of good will for the movies. But when they descend in such numbers they cause too many interruptions in production. I wonder why the major studios couldn't solve the problem this way: Have guides to show the lot and a bit of actual shooting to the out-of-towners and keep the big production and dramatic sets closed. It's just an idea—but it is important to Hollywood that visitors be not sent away disappointed and thinking that the studios are ritzie.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Gil Haggerty, who is thataway about Joan Crawford, will follow her to Hollywood; the Dick Smarts have dated the stork. She was Patricia Monteagle and he owns the Parker ranch, show place in Honolulu; Al Hall and Fay Wray have discovered each other; Bubbles Schinasi visited Wayne Morris, her estranged bridegroom, at the Cedars of Lebanon, where he is a patient; the Johnny Weissmullers celebrated their first wedding anniversary yesterday. Their first baby is due any minute; Constance Bennett has Jean Arthur's suite on the Columbia lot.

Mrs. Don Ameche left the hospital yesterday with the new baby, but doctors orders are that she remain in bed six weeks; the Ronald Colmans hosted a party last night; Annabella has left for New York to check up with her doctor on her recent operation. She flies back Sunday; Annie Sothern and Roger Pryor are entertaining his daughter; those two men-about-town, Jackie Cooper and Robert Stack, have gone on a sailing trip. Jackie's mother, who has been critically ill following an operation, is now out of danger and this is the first time he has dared leave her.

Ken Duncan and Margaret Roach are going to Del Mar where his horse, Scrambled, makes its maiden appearance; Bob Benchley has promised to lay the cornerstone of Mike Romanoff's new Beverly Hills bar; Natalie Draper and Anatole Litvak at Gordons musical bar; Joan Davis' anniversary gift from her bridegroom is a bright red Buick; Lola Land has started a petition against Robert Young, the mayor of Tarzana, who wants to replace the Tarzana sign. I'll sign that petition and so will Edgar Rice Burroughs.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Ability Bars Actor From Directing

Fritz Feld finds himself in the somewhat amazing position of being too good an actor.

Feld wants to direct. In fact, he has directed pictures in Europe but not in this country. And indications are that he isn't going to get a chance soon. For his acting is too good. As fast as he finishes a role at one studio he jumps into a part at another. Right now he is playing the conductor of the girls' orchestra in Paramount's filmization of the Joseph Conrad novel, "Victory."

Star Is Recovering From Leg Injury

William Boyd has checked out of the Hollywood Hospital and gone to his mountain top ranch, 45 miles from the nine center, to recover from his broken leg.

Dr. Paul McMatser, bone specialist, holds out the promise that the star will be able to resume his role in the suspended "Doomed Caravan" in six or seven weeks.

BERNHEIMER'S THEATERS

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Mr. H. Gabriel Menendez, purveyor of prize fights to the Washington trade, was around selling his newest wares the other day. "Here," said Menendez, extracting two pictures from his sample book, "is a neat little number I am showing for Monday at Griffith Stadium. It's the latest thing in two-tone welterweight bouts."

POVICH

"In my Izzy Jannazzo-Holman Williams show I am getting away completely from the pale effects which almost killed boxing in the District of Columbia," said Menendez. "The clash of colors is the latest thing. We were quick to steal it from the new trend in automobile bodies. People want color. I'm giving it to 'em in white men vs. colored men in the prize ring."

The white man in this instance is Jannazzo, a tough-looking Italian with a prize shock of curly black hair and a mug that could be leased for house-haunting purposes. The colored boy is Williams, who, with his bullet-shaped pate, flange-like nose and wide, grinning mouth looks as if he just came off the levee.

"We are going in for quality in our Monday showing," went on Menendez who may always be excused for puffing his wares inasmuch as he gets a cut of every dollar his salesmanship entices through the gate. "The bums are out. Who is Williams? He is the third ranking welterweight in the world. Who is Jannazzo? He is the fourth ranking welterweight in the world. It's wonderful. Washington is getting places in the boxing business."

For his newest creation, Menendez has reverted to an old and stable formula of prize fight entertainment, he says. "Fundamentally, the idea is very sound. I am just dressing up the old idea of the boxer vs. the puncher which is always good business business for the matchmaker. If you can get that kind into the ring, it's bound to be a fight. Williams is my fighter and Jannazzo is my boxer. Confidentially, I can't wait for the fight to start."

Taking Menendez word for it that his two boys honestly were ranked third and fourth among the country's welterweights, we inquired how they got that way. As far as we were concerned the names of Izzy Jannazzo and Holman Williams had never struck us as household words. In fact we had never heard of 'em except in a casual sort of way around the smaller fight clubs.

"Omigod," said Menendez. "Don't you read the New York papers? Last week the New York Boxing Commission tells Henry Armstrong that Williams is his No. 1 challenger. That's who Williams is. In the last two years he lost only one fight. Kid Cocoa licked him and then he turned around and licked Cocoa. It is a feather in my cap to get Williams."

Williams, it seems, is sponsored in a passive sort of way by Joe Louis, according to Menendez. "Sure he is. When he couldn't get any fights, Joe Louis helped him out. Anywhere they wanted Louis to referee, he'd make 'em put Williams on the card. They used to handle brooms together in the Ford factory at Dearborn sweeping out the place before Louis got famous. Joe remembered his old pal when he started making money.

"Louis put up the money to buy Williams' contract from Pete Bass, his manager, and then turned him over to his own managers, Julian Black and John Roxborough. Louis is no fool. He always knew he'd have a great sparring partner, at least in Williams. The welterweight makes him step around in there and improves his speed."

According to Menendez, Jannazzo is only 26 years old, but it seems every bit of a decade ago when we first heard of Jannazzo fighting in Washington. "That was only six years ago," said Menendez. "I knew about him the first time he ever came in here to fight. I remember his fight when he licked Phil Furr. I was managing fighters myself then and people around here thought Furr was going to be champion. I didn't. I made myself a few dollars betting on Jannazzo that night."

Jannazzo hasn't had more than 50 fights despite his eight years in the ring, says Menendez. "He's got a funny kind of hook-up with his manager, Guy Anselmi. Anselmi's got plenty of money. He only puts Jannazzo in there a half dozen times a years. He won't take any fights on short notice and he wants a price when he does fight. Jannazzo went 15 rounds with Barney Ross and lost a split decision four years ago in the Garden. He hasn't fought since he licked Steve Mamakos here in April."

Menendez is giving Jannazzo and Williams each 22½ per cent of the gate for Monday's show. If it doesn't show a profit, he'll be surprised. Menendez has been doing very well for Promoter Joe Turner and himself with his match making. His last four Griffith Stadium shows have grossed $23,000, more money than was paid in at the gate at all Washington shows in 1939. It's due, Gabe says, to his new color scheme.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 22.—Memories of 1918 were stirred up today at the Blue Hills Country Club when officers from West Point supervised the first drill of the New York Football Giants. Rifles for the entire squad of 55 were purchased by Tim Mara, owner of the team, who announced that his athletes would drill after every workout from now until the close of the season.

CONSIDINE

During the World War many big league baseball teams staged daily drills. The idea was generated in the fertile brain of Clark Griffith the day he was told by the Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker, and by Gen. Peyton C. March that the big league season must end by July 4 of 1918. Griff set his team to drilling with bats, got other clubs doing it, and convinced the Army men that the ball players were keeping in better shape than they could at a camp. The War Department let the season run until Labor Day.

Mara sent his alert operative, Chick Wargeles, out of the office at full speed the other day to announce the impending drill sessions of the Giants. The command that galvanized Wargeles into dynamic action was Mara's "tell it to the papers before George Marshall thinks it up."

Once assured that the idea would be the Giants' own, and that Marshall would be placed in the position of copying him, if he decides to arm Baugh & Co., Mara came forth with this sensible statement:

"I think every other club in the league should do what the Giants are going to do this season, because it will not only prepare our players for any possible service to the country but also might set an example that will be taken up by factories, offices and other groups employing large numbers of able-bodied men."

There was considerably less precision in the Giants' manual of arms than in their shift into punt formation, but we doubt if any military man since Frederick the Great (who liked 'em big) ever looked upon a platoon of more able-bodied men.

Stout Steve Owen and his brother coach, Beefy Bill Owen, will be excused from drilling until such time as they are able to "present arms" without committing hara-kiri with the gun on the way up.

In case you've been wondering how a match between the best pro tennis player and the best amateur would make out, there was an informal session of this nature the other day at Forest Hills. Don Budge played Bobby Riggs four sets. Big Don breezed through the first two sets, kidding Riggs along by calling him "Mr. Riggs," as amateurs were once known. Then he bet Riggs a Coca-Cola on the third set and Riggs won it, 6—4, after leading 4—1.

"When the chips are down, that's me," Bobby yelled across the net.

They started the fourth set, with no bet on it. Budge began pounding the ball with all the fervor at his command and swept the amateur champ away, 6—2.

Despite the war the national singles, which starts next week, will have a colorful foreign player. He is Francisco Seugra, 19-year old Ecuadorean and champion of South America. He won the title from one Salvador Deik, of Chile, in a match played on cement. Seugra never took a lesson in his tender life. Like Jack Bromwich, he was a two-handed forehand, but goes Bromwich one better with a two-handed backhand—even uses this grip when he's volleying. His service is eccentric and he is only 5 feet 3.

"PAL BOB," postcards the world's greatest fight manager, my fighter, Tiger Jackie Flowers, knocked out Babe Scott in 1 minute and 50 seconds of 1 round in Washington, D. C., Monday. He is middleweight; had to use whammy fast then we cut up purse. Best of luck. Friend Ben (Evil Eye) Finkle."

He may be Jerome Herman Dean to you and Mrs. Dean, but he's still Jay Hannah Dean to the house organ of the Chicago Cubs, the Cubs News. Editor Charles F. Drake, who should know, always refers to Dean by the latter first names. When he first came to the big leagues Dean announced that Jay Hannah were his given names. Then he changed his mind and said they were Jerome Herman. After that he got confused, too, and when one of the Cardinal bosses reprimanded him for telling one reporter one name and another writer a different name, Dean brayed, "You can't keep telling them guys the same story. They gotta have something different to write, don't they?"

Incidentally, Roy Johnson, manager of the Tulsa club, is working Dean every four days, and sometimes more often. Recently Dean pitched two full games in six days and relieved in another. During that stretch he shut out Dallas, 1-0, on two hits.

Detroit Wins On Relief of Hutchinson

Newsom Pounded in Second; Bosox Lose, 9 to 8, After Holding Six-Run Margin

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 22.—Relief Pitcher Freddie Hutchinson hurled shutout ball after replacing Buck Newsom in the second inning, with the Tigers trailing 8 to 2 today and drove in the winning run as the second-place Detroit Tigers topped the Boston Red Sox, 9 to 8, in ten innings.

The victory, breaking a six-game Detroit losing streak, dropped the Red Sox from third to fourth place, behind the New York Yankees, who climbed by defeating the league-leading Cleveland Indians.

Hutchinson allowed only four hits in the eight and one-third innings he pitched. His game-winning single came after Meyers singled and advanced on Tebbetts' sacrifice and Bartell's infield out.

Barney McCoskey spearheaded the Tigers' uphill surge with two triples, one with the bases loaded.

East Wins In Intra-Squad Game, 17-to-14

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 22.—A 45-yard field goal off the toe of Bo Russell, 218-pound tackle, tonight gave Coach Ray Flaherty's Eastern Redskins a 17-14 victory over Capt. Turk Edwards' Western brigade as both East and West indulged in an exhibition of aerial warfare before 13,000 persons in Sick Stadium.

Unable to crack the powerful West line, the East stole their adversaries' main weapon—passing—and put it to a great test in driving to reaching distance of the goal posts.

Earlier in the quarter Dick Todd had put on a display of razzle-dazzle running that tied up the game when he took the ball on the West's 22, went back to pass and was forced to run. He sneaked his way through the mass for a touchdown and Russell kicked the extra point to make it 14-14.

Then with three minutes left to play, Russell went back to his 48, took a couple of steps forward to the 45, where Frank Filchock was holding the ball and then let go with a boot that sent the ball sailing perfectly through the uprights.

There was no question, as in the case of Russell's now famous effort in the New York Giants' Redskin game of last year, about the kick, and the 13,000 on hand to see the charity game went wild. The contest was staged for the war refugee children and to test Flaherty's rookie aggregation. As a whole the team appeared sluggish, slow on getting their signals. From start to finish it was a passing exhibition.

West Scores First

The West drew first blood after Capt. Turk Edwards won the toss, kicked to Andy Farkas, East fullback. The East's first play from their 14 went afoul when Sammy Baugh intercepted Frank Filchock's pass on the East's 43 and ran it to the 21. A first down and a 5-yard penalty for offside against the East followed and then Jimmy Johnston took it over from the 2-yard line. Sandy Sanford, rookie from Alabama, came in and kicked the extra point.

The West kicked off again, got the best of an exchange of punts and were on the way to another score when Roy Zimmerman, halfback rookie from San Jose State, passed into his left zone right into the arms of Dick Todd, East half. Todd galloped 92 yards unmolested and Bo Russell kicked the extra point to make it East 7; West, 7, as the quarter ended.

West Strikes Again

Wasting no time, the Western brigade struck again after the second quarter was but three minutes old, this time with Max Krause taking it over from the West's 1-yard line. Sanford again kicked the extra point to make the score, West, 14; East, 7.

After an exchange of punts, the East took the ball on its own 11. A 27-yard run by Jimmy German through the middle after he could find no center put the ball on the 38. Filchock's pass to Todd was good for 11. Frank picked up 3 yards through the middle and then hurled a long pass on to Wayne Millner down on the West's 37—the first time the East had advanced that far. A fumble by Todd ended the scoring threat there, however, and then Zimmermen came forward with a scintillating display of passing.

The West advanced to the 35,

Bill Werber's Homer Wins For Reds, 3-2

Circuit Blow Gives Walters 17th Victory As Boston Bows

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 22.—Bill Werber has been hitting home runs only on occasion this season, but today he got his twelfth at the best possible time, and the Cincinnati Reds finally gave Bucky Walters his long awaited seventeenth victory. The Boston Bees were the victims, 3 to 2.

Bucky and Nick Strincevich, the latter pitching under the handicap of a boil on his face, had dueled through 8½ innings. The Reds had scored a pair of runs in the third and the Bees tied it up in the sixth when Max West hit his fourth homer of the year with Gene Moore on base.

Strincevich pitched just one ball to Werber when the Reds came out for their ninth. That ball went far and true over the leftfield wall and the ball game was over. The victory, coupled with Brooklyn's loss to Chicago, ran the Reds' lead to 6½ games.

One slight cloud over the proceedings was the protest filed by Manager Casey Stengel of the Bees. Werber figured in that, too. With two out and a man on first in the B..es' fourth, Eddie Miller lifted a high foul over by the third base boxes. Werber stuck his glove into the crowd and came out with the ball. Casey said Bill picked it up from a fan's lap and Bill said he caught it. Umpire George Dunn agreed with Bill. Casey argued and was chased from the field but not before he announced the protest.

Strincevich muffed an opportunity to win his own game in the ninth. Chet Ross opened with a double to centerfield and was sacrificed to third. Walters then struck out Sibi Sisti, purposely walked Buddy Hassett, batting for Phil Masi, and made Nick send a force-play roller to Lonnie Frey.

Olsen Allows Dodgers 2 Hits as Cubs Win, 5-0

Medwick and Vosmik Hit Safely in Seventh Inning to Spoil Hurler's Game; Wyatt Charged With Loss

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 22.—For six innings today 22-year-old Verne Olsen, of the Chicago Cubs, had visions of a no-hit, no-run game.

But in the seventh Ducky Medwick and Joe Vosmick, of the Brooklyn Dodgers touched him for singles, a pair of blows that made no difference in the outcome as the Cubs won, 5-0, to hand the Dodgers their fourth straight Western setback.

Whitlow Wyatt, the Brooklyn ace, was batted off the mound in the fourth as the Cubs scored their last three runs by bunching four of the 10 hits they got off Wyatt, and his two successors, Ed Head and Hugh Casey, in that frame.

The Cubs took a commanding lead as early as the third when two hits and two Brooklyn errors were good for two runs.

The victory was Olsen's ninth of the season, against eight losses. Wyatt was charged with his eleventh loss.

Giants Divide Pair With Bucs, Share 3d Place

N. Y. Wins Opener, 5-4, Blanked in Nightcap; Cards Tie in Standings

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 22.—The Giants split a double bill with the Pittsburg Pirates today—and as a result share third place with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Victors in the first game, 5 to 4, thanks to Mickey Vitek's game-winning twelfth-inning single that scored Mel Ott (the same combination that won for the Giants the day before), the New Yorkers folded in the second, and were whitewashed, 4 to 0.

The split, coupled with the St. Louis' Cards 9-to-0 rout of the Phils, enabled the Gashouse Gang to creep into a third place tie with the Terrymen.

Truett (Rip) Sewell spun a five-hitter that had the Giants hanging on the ropes all the way. The Pirates also had Elbie Fletcher to thank for the victory, for the hit a homer with two on in the sixth, to provide the clincher.

It was Sewell's third win over the Giants and his eleventh of the season.

The Pirates lost the first in spite of Vince DiMaggio, who blasted out two homers, two singles, got two walks and drove in three runs. After the Bucs filled the bases in the eleventh with none out and failed to score, the Giants took heart the next time up and won when Ott singled, advanced to third on Tony Cuccinello's single and scored on Witek's rap through short.

Joe DiMaggio Leads Attack On Al Milnar

Near Free-for-All In Second Inning; New York Shoves 9 Runs Over in 2d

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 22.—The Yankees knocked the roof in on the Cleveland Indians today by turning loose their biggest one-inning scoring spree of the season on the way to a 15-to-2 victory over the American League pace-setters.

The triumph opened a three-game series and was put on for the entertainment of 12,732 spectators. The loss, coupled with Detroit's win over Boston, cut the Indians' lead to 4½ games.

Near Free-for-All

Among other things that happened during the afternoon was a near free-for-all during the second inning. It started when Lefty Al Milnar took exception to some of the "needling" Coach Earl Combs, of the Yanks, was hurling at him. Soon the entire squads of both clubs were milling around first base until Umpire Steve Basil broke it up.

In the second inning, the Yanks shoved nine runs across the plate, featured by Joe DiMaggio's homer with the bases loaded. Dead Pan Joe also conected for a single with the bases packed during a four-run rally in the sixth inning, and a double in the fourth.

So it was just a breeze for Southpaw Marius Russo to coast in with his tenth victory of the year. He held the Tribe to six hits.

Milner Is Routed

Al Milnar, who once held the Yanks to two hits, tried to repeat today—but the honeymoon was over early after Roy Weatherly and Tommy Henrich traded homers in the first frame. George Selkirk walked twice during the hectic second frame. Bill Dickey singled and, the second time up, hit a homer; Russo and Red Rolfe also came through with singles, and the Indians obliged with timely errors by Milnar and Ray Mack.

Both the Indian runs came on homers—Weatherly's in the first inning and Beau Bell's in the fourth.

Heurich Brewers Defeat Cameo Nine for League Title, 6-2

4,000 See Playoff Game On Ellipse

Beerman Earn Berth In City Tourney by Virtue of Victory; 4th Inning Rally Aids

The third straight title in The Washington Post Industrial League was captured by Heurich's cagey Brewers yesterday when they disposed of Cameo Furniture nine, 6 to 2, in the third game of a play-off for the championship.

Upward of 4,000 spectators lined the West Ellipse to see the Brewers notch their second triumph in two days, after losing the opening game of the crucial series. With their victory, the veteran Beermen earned a berth in the local Amateur Baseball Federation tournament, starting Monday, and a chance to represent the District sandlots in the national tourney in Birmingham, Ala., September 5.

Fourth-Inning Rally

It was a fourth-inning spree, breaking a 2-to-2 deadlock, that was solely accountable for the victory. Heurich had hung up a pair of runs in the opening inning, but in the second Cameo managed to tie.

Then the defending champions went to work in earnest. Four straight singles were registered to start the fourth—by Murphy, Posnack, Stahl and Cabell. That brought in only one run but left the bases loaded. Cameo Pitcher Ottie Printz boosted Heurich's edge to two runs when he walked Herzberger to first and Posnack home.

The other half of the four-run splurge resulted when Dick Knight sent a long fly to Adair in right-field. Cabell tagged up and scored after the catch, but on the throw-in the ball took a bad hop over Catcher Schwab's head and Herzberger also tallied. The disastrous inning was finally ended when Kaufman swung without success at a third strike.

Printz Yields Six Hits

After that, Printz remained in fairly good control of things, allowing only one more hit. In all he was touched for six safeties, while Heurich's Art Lacey gave the struggling Furniture nine only five.

In the sixth inning Cameo's hopes of winning took a further tumble when "Booty" McQuinn, second baseman, was cut deeply on the left wrist tagging Cabell and was forced out of action.

Cards Take 7th Straight, Beat Phils, 9-0

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 22.—The onrushing Cardinals, who may have started too late, won their seventh straight victory today, beating Philadelphia, 9 to 0, and jumping into a tie with the New York Giants for third place in the National League.

Morton Cooper limited the Phils to six hits, while the Cardinals were pounding out 12, including Johnny Mize's thirty-sixth home run of the season. It came with two men on base in the first inning after Terry Moore already had driven in a run with a double.

A single by Moore with two men on the runways, Slaughter's double and Mize's single drove in four more runs in the sixth inning, and the last tally came in the eighth on a hit batsman and Slaughter's triple.

Crosby, Scott Try for Berths In Amateur

748 Golfers in Qualifying Rounds For Championship

By the United Press

New York, Aug. 22.—Two of Hollywood's brightest stars, Bing Crosby and Randolph Scott, will try to win the National amateur golf championship this year.

Their entries became known today when the United States Golf Association released the names of 748 golfers who will try to qualify next Tuesday in sectional rounds to be played in 28 parts of the country. These players will gun for 140 places available in the tournament proper September 9-14 at the Winged Foot Country Club near Mamaroneck, N. Y.

SCOTT

The full field will be 150 with ten former champions exempt from qualifying. The places were distributed about the country according to the size of the various local fields and the quality of the entry list, ranging from 25 places available to 143 men in New York to one for three players in Seattle, Wash.

Abbott in Play

Scott and Crosby will try to win two of the four places available to 16 entries in the Los Angeles district. Also shooting for a place there will be Pat Abbott, finalist against Willie Turnesa in the 1938 tournament.

The entry list, in addition to containing the names of some of the best amateur players, also includes men famous for their feats off the links. Dan Topping, owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers football team, Bridge Expert P. Hal Sims and Ellsworth Vines, the tennis player, are three who will try to gain some of the 25 places available in the New York rounds. The sports writing industry has an entry in W. Vernon Tietjen, baseball writer for the St. Louis Star-Times.

The keenest competition is expected to come in New York and Dallas. Among some of the better golfers playing in New York will be Art Lynch, Ellis Knowles, Charles Whitehead, Frank Strafaci, former public links champion; Ray Billows, runner-up in 1937 and 1939, and Tommy Goodwin at Dallas, where six places are available to 21 entries, Jack Munger, Reynolds Smith, Don Schumacher and Royal Hogan, brother of the famous Ben, will try to qualify.

CROSBY

Public Links Players Entered

Two famous public links players will also try to qualify. This year the U. S. G. A. invited the four semi-finalists of the recent National Public Links championship to try to qualify for the amateur and two of them accepted—Champion Robert Clark, who plays Tuesday at Minneapolis, and Ed Furgol, who plays at Detroit.

Two former British amateur champions also will play—Robert Sweeny, jr., at New York, and Charley Yates at Atlanta.

Other well-known amateurs who have to qualify are: John Burke, 1938 intercollegiate champion; Albert (Scotty) Campbell, Walker Cup star; Walter Emery, runner-up in 1935 to Lawson Little; Bill Holt, jr.; Thomas Sheehan, jr., medalist in last year's tournament; Fred Haas, jr., another Walker Cupper.

Reliable Double-Play Combine, Good Southpaws 'Make' Tribe

Boudreau, Mack Save Many Games; Smith, Milnar Round Out Pitching

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Aug. 22.—A double-play combination that can and a couple of left-handed pitchers who know how have made a different ball club of the Cleveland Indians this year.

One and all, from Ossie Vitt, the boss, right down to Lefty the Doc Weisman, who heads the charley-horse and rubdown department, are agreed the sparkle of Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack around second and the portside comebacks of Al Milnar have pulled the Tribe right out there in front of the pennant parade.

"You gotta know what it means to a pitcher to have a hot double-play pair behind him," Vitt explained today. "Why, we lost nine games alone last year on balls through the middle that we couldn't come up with for double plays. Five of them we dropped to the Yanks alone. Now we make 'em all the time.

"Take Wednesday's game in Boston, fr instance. We got a little lead in the ninth, but Mel Harder's tiring and the the Red Sox put men on first and third.

Saved Harder

Lou Finney's up, and he's a hard guy to handle. He hits a ball down to Boudreau on three hops. It's over to Mack, to Trosky—and the ball game's over, and saved.

"Y' know, after that one, Mel told me he'd have been a 25-game winner four-five years ago, if he had those two kids behind him. And they don't fold. They have recuperative powers. Say, that's a good word—that recuperative."

Without taking a thing away from Bobby Feller and his zip ball, the lefties, Smith and Milnar, have been carrying a lot of weight. Between them, they've won 29 and lost 12. Lefty Al Smith was given his walking papers by Bill Terry some time back, and Catcher Frankie Pytlak believes the year he spent at Buffalo after that may have made a winner of him.

O'Neill Helps Pitchers

"One season under Steve O'Neill is gonna help any flinger," Frankie explains. "Al has lots more stuff now than ever before—a screwball, a good curve, and once in a while he puts a slider in there."

Lefty, the Doc, puts his finger on another possible reason the Tribe is no longer the club that "has it in May and loses it in September."

"We got reserves on the bench who'd make the first string on any club," he points out. "Jeff Heath is a pretty good outfielder isn't he? But he's on the bench, ready when needed. And Pytlak is a good catcher and Ossie Grimes—well, in my book he's the best all-'round utility man anywhere."

Jim Ferrier Wins Chicago Amateur Title

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 22—Big Jim Ferrier, Amateur and Open champion of Australia, late today added the Chicago District amateur golf championship to his collection of titles by defeating Walter Murkemo, of Evanston, Ill., 3 and 2.

One down at the twenty-seventh hole, Ferrier came back with a sparkling attack, sprinkled with three birdies, to win his first American triumph on the final nine holes.

Ferrier's victory, won on the difficult Riverside Golf Club course, took the championship out of America for the first time in the 27-year history of the event.

The "break" in the bitterly contested match came on the twenty-eighth, when Ferrier negotiated a partial stymie for a birdie. He lost the twenty-ninth by overshooting the green, but took the next four holes, to clinch the title.

The Australian's first victim in the current campaign was Bill Chambers, of Chicago, who previously had dethroned Wilford Wehrle, District champion. He next sank Art Doering, of Chicago, winner this summer of the trans-Mississippi title. A gallery of 1,000, largest in the history of the classic, watched him take the measure of Burkemo.

Ferrier was low amateur in the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Open tourneys; second low in the National Open, and was co-medalist and semi-finalist in the Western Amateur at Minneapolis.

Both Ferrier and Burkemo will enter the Illinois sectional qualifying round of the National amateur championship next week at Flossmoor. The National will be staged September 9-14 at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Lew Jenkins, Doran Hurt In Auto Crash

Lightweight Champion On Way to Philly For Scheduled Bout

By the Associated Press

Sparta, Tenn., Aug. 22.—Lightweight boxing champion Lew Jenkins received a cut on the head and wrenched his back and side in an automobile accident here today.

Dan Doran, Canadian welterweight fighter who accompanied him, received a fractured jaw and lacerations on the nose, chin and leg.

The car, which belonged to Jenkins but which he said Doran was driving at the time, missed a curve, struck a tree and was demolished. Jenkins and Doran were treated at the Sparta Hospital and then went to a hotel where Jenkins said later his companion was "badly hurt."

Jenkins said they were en route from Sweetwater, Tex., where he had been visiting his mother, to Philadelphia, where he was scheduled to fight September 9.

"I was riding on the back seat and when we hit I was thrown clear through the front of the car and about 10 feet away," Jenkins said. "I had three stitches taken in my head and my back and side are strained bad."

The lightweight champion said he had been threatened with suspension unless he fought by September 9 and was hurrying to Philadelphia to get in shape.

"I've wired the commission about the accident," he added, saying he planned to remain here until he received instructions as to what he should do about his scheduled bout with Bob Montgomery.

Redskins to Halt Sales at 10,000

The Washington Redskins management has set 10,000 as a final goal for 1940 season tickets. As soon as the 10,000th ticket is bought, the sale will be closed.

This is being done in order that single-game tickets for the opening game, September 15 with Brooklyn, may be placed on sale on September 4. Even if the sale does not reach the 10,000 mark, the sale will close definitely on September 3.

Priced at $9 each, season tickets are available in upper stand right-field, lower stand at the goal line and along first base, and in the field stand on the 35-yard line.

Lou Plummer, Newman Win Again at Arena

Before 1,800 fans—the largest crowd to see a wrestling show locally since The French Angel appeared last winter—the terrorizing two-man team of Lou Plummer and Ed Newman continued its display of bravado last night at Turner's Arena.

Plummer and Newman registered their third straight victory by thrashing the combination of Tommy O'Toole and Emil Dusek, the latter substituting for The Golden Terror, who, according to O'Toole, took the proverbial run-out powder.

It was the wildest two-man match since this type of wrestling was introduced a few weeks ago at the Arena, and came to an end when both O'Toole and Dusek collided head-on in the center of the ring while attempting to execute flying tackles against their opponents. The impact sent O'Toole and Dusek spinning like a couple of Nazi torpedoes—plumb on their heads on the canvas. And it was an easy matter for Plummer to flop on O'Toole and Newman on Dusek.

Dusek was pinned first in eight minutes, and O'Toole pinned in ten minutes. Then Newman lost a fall in 5½ and Plummer in 8½ minutes, setting the stage for the head-on collision.

Ernie Dusek, the Nebraska Wildcat, was in rare form, getting revenge on his time-honored rival, Joe Cox. Ernie won in 40 minutes with a dropkick to the jaw, after Cox had fired two dropkicks to Ernie's kisser.

In other bouts Eddie Pope, North Carolina boy, made a big hit in drawing with Maurice LaChappelle, and Warren Bockwinkle won from Sheriff Tom Hanley in 19½ minutes with a backdrop.

Riggs and Van Horn Defeated in National Doubles Upset

Guernsey, Bobbitt Halt Seeded Pair

Mrs. Van Ryn and Dorothy Bundy Jolt No. 2 Team, 6-4, 6-4, In Women's Section

By the Associated Press

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 22.—The even tempo of the national doubles tennis tournament was rudely shattered today when an unseeded team in both the men's and women's divisions staged surprising upsets to crash the semi-finals at Longwood.

The most powerful jolt to whet the gallery that hungered for some excitement was supplied by Rus Bobbitt, of Atlanta, and Frank Gurnsey, of Orlando, Fla., when they eliminated the second-seeded Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, 6-2, 7-5, 3-6, 8-6.

The fireworks in the women's quarter finals play were set off by Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., and Dorothy Bundy, of Santa Monica. That unranked pair disposed of another No. 2 team, Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, and Pauline Betz, of Beverly Hills, Calif., in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4.

Some Form Prevails

Form, however, prevailed in the most decisive fashion in all of the other third last rounders. The top-seeded Frank Parker, of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, stroked themselves into a 6—3, 6—4, 7—5 win over William Reedy and Kenneth Bartlet, of Los Angeles, without too much exertion.

In the other men's quarter-finals, third-seeded Jack Kramer, of Montabello, Calif., and Ted Schroeder, of Los Angeles, swept from behind and outlasted Charles Mattmann, of Los Angeles, and Robert Harman, of Berkeley, Calif., for a 4—6, 6—3, 12—10, 6—4 verdict, while the No. 4 tandem, Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., and Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, overcame Joe Hunt, of Annapolis, Md., and Ted Olewine, of Los Angeles, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4, 6—1.

As they have been doing for the past three years, Defending Champions Alice Marble and Sarah Palfrey showed the way into the semi-finals by merely going through their stylish motions as they erased Emily Lincoln, of Brookline, and Catherine Malcolm, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—2.

Coast Girls Win

The other women's matches ended with Patricia Canning, of Los Angeles, and Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco, romping through Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, for a 6—1, 6—2 triumph, and the British Wightman Cup stars, Valerie Scott atnd Mary Hardwick, out-tussling determined Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., and Mary Arnold, of Los Angeles, through a stirring match that ended with the count 6—4, 4—6, 6—2.

The nearest to an overturn in the other four divisions of the tourney, which also includes mixed, father-son, men's and women's veterans' doubles, came when Mrs. Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., gained a 6—4, 6—4 win over Miss Hardwick and Mattmann. The latter pair were seeded second on the mixed doubles' foreign list.

Mixed Second Round Doubles

Dorothy Bundy, Santa Monica, Cal., and Jack Kramer, Montabello, Cal., defeated Helen Knowles, Beverly, Mass., and Gilbert Hunt, Washington, 6—2, 6—3.

Sarah Palfrey, Reno, Nev., and Welby Van Horn, Los Angeles, defeated Patricia Canning, and Ted Olewine, Los Angeles, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3.

Margaret Osborne, San Francisco, and Edwin Amark, Oakland, Cal., defeated Valerie Scott, England, nad Joe Hunt, Annapolis, Md., 6—4, 7—5.

Alice Marble, Beverly Hills, Cal., and Bobby Riggs, Chicago, defeated Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, France, and William Vost, Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—3.

Virginia Wolfenden, San Francisco, and Frank Kovacs, Oakland, Cal., defeated Dorothy Wightman, Brookline, and W. C. Choy, China, 6—0, 6—0.

Pauline Betz, Beverly Hills, and Ted Schroeder, Los Angeles, defeated Barbara Bradley and F. R. Gay, Los Angeles, 6—3, 2—6, 6—2.

Mrs. John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, Austin, Tex., defeated Mary Hardwick, England, and Charles Mattmann, Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—4.

Mary Arnold, Los Angeles, and William Talbert, Cincinnati, defeated Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Cal., and Don McNeill, Oklahoma City, 7—5, 4—6, 6—3.

Veterans' Second Round Doubles

L. B. Baker, Washington, and W. W. Weld, Boston, defeated L. R. Gay, Los Angeles, and W. R. Heimbolx, Boston, 4—6, 7—5, 6—3.

W. D. Cunningham, and S. J. Adams, Jr., New York, defeated J. J. Armstrong and W. E. Widen, Detroit, 4—6, 6—3, 6—3.

Browns Slam 18 Hits, Rout Macks, 8 to 4

Berardino Has Perfect Night at Bat With Five Straight Bingles

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—Led by Johnny Berardino, who got five hits the rest of the game, three St. Louis Browns pounded out 18 hits tonight to beat the Athletics, 8 to 4.

A triple by Wilson Dee Miles put the A's out in front in the first inning, but the Browns came back to score three runs in the fifth on Walt Judnich's double and Harlond Clift's single.

In the sixth three more hits, including one by Pitcher Bob Harris, who held the A's to eight hits, sent Johnny Babich to the showers. Southpaw Chubby Dean came in and gave up four runs and seven hits the rest of the game. Three of these hits in the ninth and scored three runs on Berardino's fifth single and Don Heffner's one-base blow.

Doubles by Joe Gantenbein, Sam Chapman and Dick Siebert gave the A's two runs in the sixth. Frank Hayes' two-bagger and a single by Pinchhitter Al Simmons accounted for the other in the ninth.

Chicago, Aug. 22 (AP).—George McAfee, star Duke halfback, came to terms with the Chicago Bears, national professional football club, today. Owner-Coach George Halas said the speedy rookie probably would be used at right half.

McAfee, drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles, was obtained by the Bears in a trade.

Maul Upsets Anderson in Parks Tennis

Crowthers, Seeded No. 2, Also Eliminated in Play at Cincinnati

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 22.—For the second year in a row, Willis Anderson, of Los Angeles, met disappointment today in the National Public Parks Tennis Tournament.

The 1938 champion, Anderson missed a repeat last year in New York, and today hard-hitting sixth-seeded Bill Maul, of Detroit, dropped him out of the quarter-finals in a five-set battle that kept the fans guessing to the final moment.

Maul took the first set, 6—4, but Anderson rallied for the second by the same score. Maul got the third, 7—5, but lost the fourth, 4—6. Then the duel really began and before the Detroiter won the score had run up to 9—7.

Crowthers Eliminated

Charles Shostrom, of Chicago, handed the tournament another upset when he put out Jerry Crowthers, of Los Angeles, seeded second, in four sets, 6—0, 6—1, 7—9, 7—5.

Third-seeded Dick McKee, of Jacksonville, Fla., followed form by eliminating Ed Kilgus, of Philadelphia, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2. Kilgus earlier had beaten Jim Ratliff, of Cincinnati, 6—1, 4—6, 8—6, 7—5, in a match that started yesterday and finished this morning.

In the men's doubles, the able team of Allen Carvel and Ward Parker, of St. Louis, took down Walter Smigel and Morrin Milcoff, of East Cleveland, 10—8, 7—5, 4—6, 7—5.

Other Scores

Edward Moylan, of Trenton, N. J., defeated Harold Jensen, of Minneapolis, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2.

Kay Welsh and Joe Kristufek, of Pittsburgh, defeated Bernadine Schriener and Fred Olson, of St. Paul, Minn., 6—1, 6—3.

Dorothy Busch and Harold Jensen, of Minneapolis, defaulted to Frances Jackson and Allen Carvel, of St. Louis.

Banner Week-End Looms for Anglers; Great School of Norfolk Spot Move In; Stripers in Abundance

There is every indication that this should be a banner week-end for anglers. The ubiquitous hardhead has entirely disappeared from many of his haunts in the bay, but where this is true great schools of large Norfolk spot and the forerunners of the trout schools have moved in to take his place.

ACKERMAN

From the No. 27 black can buoy off West River to Thomas' Light all three have been caught in real numbers, while just off the rocks of the light small stripers are raising to chum like barnyard fowl at feeding time. Capt. Bob Lee, on a busman's holiday Monday evening, caught 73 in a couple of hours.

A place that should be good right now, atlhough we have had no report on it, is the bell buoy off Annapolis entrance. Some big trout have been taken there during the past several years, and with this season having all the earmarks of being exceptional as far as trout are concerned, there is no reason why they shouldn't be there again this year, and in greater numbers.

Just below West River is Herring Bay and Holland Point. Hardheads have vanished from this grounds, and trout haven't moved in yet in any great numbers, but big spot have been supplying more fun than we have seen in many a day. A few stripers have been picked up by trollers too, but it looks as though the good going here is still a week or two off.

The Point Lookout area, which for many weeks has had just about as good fishing as it was possible to find anywhere on the bay and river, is still the No. 1 place in our estimation.

Capt. Clarke Willoughby reports one catch of 80 trout this week averaging 2 pounds; while Capt. Taft Tippett's last time out was productive of nearly twice that with as many more hardheads.

There are plenty of sharks cruising the Middles, which is usually indicative of great numbers of fish, and some channel bass, not black drum, being caught. In addition, a few small pound and pound and a half bluefish have been caught still fighting.

No showing yet of striper schools, as there was during September of 1939 along the edge of the steamboat channel from Point No Point to Point Lookout and in considerably smaller schools last year just across the mouth of the Potomac.

For striper trolling the best bet is Tall Timbers, just above Piney Point on the Maryland shore . . . the best time, from late afternoon until dark. Capt. Dick Rogers has had several small catches—from a half dozen to 13 and weighing up to 8 pounds.

In this same section—Ragged Point, just across the river, there are plenty of spot and some trout. The later so far running rather small.

Tabor Resting 'Comfortably'

Boston, Aug. 22 (AP).—Jim Tabor, Boston Red Sox third baseman, who underwent an emergency appendectomy at Brooks Hospital, Brookline, last night, was resting "comfortably" today. His nurse said he slept most of the morning.

38 Amateurs to Play For Six Places Here

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Four and under handicapped golfers from the District, Maryland and Virginia showed an apparent disregard for the National Amateur Championship according to the list released yesterday by the U. S. G. A. that revealed only 38 simon-pures will play for six places in the sectional qualifying rounds next Tuesday at Chevy Chase.

In fact, if it wasn't for the Columbia Country Club membership it would hardly be worth while holding the sectional trials for the national tournament that will be held September 9-14 at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Columbia supplied eight players or nearly one-fourth of the field from the District and surrounding States. Of the 38 players, 24 are from Washington, 12 from the Baltimore area, 2 from Virginia, and a "floater," William McIntyre, of St. Petersburg, Fla. However, Virginia players will also qualify at Huntington, W. Va., and Durham, N. C.

"Big Six" Entered

The District's "big six" is represented in full, Roger Peacock, Bobby Brownell, Volney Burnett, Ralph Bogart, Billy Shea and Parker Nolan. Baltimore's best bets will be Spencer Overton and Otto Greiner, while Virginia will be represented by Jimmy Watts, Lynchburg, and Sam Bates, Virginia Beach.

The host Chevy Chase club will be represented only by Richard D. Lunn, of New York, and Page Hufty.

The story made the rounds that from 60 to 80 golfers from this section would be entered and that would leave the places at the dozen mark, or more. It proved greatly exaggerated, as the list shows.

The U. S. G. A. yearbook does not list Congressional, Argyle, Woodmont and Belle Haven among its member clubs, and thus the amateurs from those clubs can be excused from not entering. However, Congressional has joined since the first of the year. Washington Golf and Country Club, Burning Tree and Army and Navy were the only local member clubs not represented.

Columbia Heads List

Through the efforts of Reds Banagan and Earle Skinker, Columbia leads the list with eight players, while Capital came through with five, the only unexpectedly good showing of the entire list. Congressional has four players, Chevy Chase, Manor and Beaver Dam two each, and Indian Spring, despite its list of good amateurs, has only Peacock in the pairings.

The qualifying trials will be under the Maryland State Golf Association, with Dr. R. A. Kelty, Harry G. Pitt and Emmet Gary supervising. The field will play 36 holes Tuesday, starting at 9 o'clock in the morning and 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

Columbia Club's big representation includes Luther Steward, jr., George F. Miller, Earle Skinker, Norman B. Frost, Martin F. McCarthy, Capt. Jesse Auton, Ray Swearingen, and George M. Ferris.

Browell was the only District golfer qualified to the amteuur championship in Chicago last year, and from the golf he has been playing the past two weeks will be choice not only to win a place but lead the field for the U. S. G. A. qualifying medal.

The course will be open on Monday for a practice round.

The Cene Captures Star Class Yacht Race in Series

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 22 (AP).—The Cene, skippered by the Ross brothers, Charles and Bob, of Puget Sound, Wash., won the third race of the International Star Class Yacht championship today in 2 hours 14 minutes and 7 seconds.

San Diego's Whitecap III and Los Angeles' Rambunctious II, sailed by James and Gordon Cowie, brothers, took the lead in point totals, however, with 31 each.

The Cene was tied with three other craft for third place in points—the Twin Star, from Wilemette Harbor, Ill.; Scout III, Newport Harbor, Calif., and The Jade, of West San Francisco, with 30 each.

Naval Air Beats Pepco, 3-2

Second Game Of Play-Offs Slated Today

Airmen Now Favored In U. S. Government Series; Fairley Is Winning Hurler

The Naval Air Station nine nosed out Pepco, 3-2, in the first of a three-game playoff series yesterday on the Ellipse to decide the U. S. Government League champion and opponent for the Heurich Brewers in the city playoff.

Jesse Fairley, making his first mound appearance for the Airmen, limited the utility nine to four scattered blows, two of which were bunched in the eighth inning when he was removed for Wagner, who disposed of the last two batters.

With Charlie Meads, their fastball ace, still in reserve, the seamen hold a decided edge over Pepco in the series, which will be resumed today at Naval Air Station starting at 4:45.

Eastern Redskins Defeat Westerns

where the ball died when Sanford's two successive tries for a field goal were wide. As the half ended, Bob Seymour, rookie half from Oklahoma University, intercepted Filchock's pass on his own 45, leaving the score at half time, West, 14; East, 7.

Bo Russell kicked off for the East to Ray Hare, and the East was forced to kick after bringing the ball out to their 48. The West gained three yards after Filchock took Baugh's punt on the West's 20, and Spirida kicked to the East 35. Baugh's pass to Sanford was intercepted by Filchock, who ran it to his own 34 line. Then the West line went to work on Farkas, German and Filchock, driving them back toward their own goal line until Jim Meade was forced behind his own goal line to kick.

Meade's kick sailed 70 yards in the air over the head of Seymour, and the East regained the ball on the West's 45 a few seconds later on a fumble by the West as the quarter ended.

Pass Attack Clicks

The East regained possession of the ball on its own 48-yard line, at the start of the fourth period, after Zimmerman went back of his own goal line to punt out of danger. Then Ernie Lain, 230-pound fullback rookie from Rice, came into the game and promptly hurled a first-down pass to Filchock on the East's 29.

Three line plays left the ball at scrimmage, and on the fourth, Dick Todd went back to pass, was rushed and decided to run it out. He went 13 yards. Another incomplete pass, and Todd went back again. Rushed by Dick Farman and Turk Edwards, Todd was forced back to his 22. Then he wiggled and slithered right through the middle of the Eastern eleven and went across the goal line standing up. Bo Russell kicked the extra point to tie things up, 14 to 14.

Russell's kickoff struck the goal post and bounded out to the East 10. The aerial warfare began anew, with Sammy Baugh doing the passing, and the East advanced to their own 31 before Baugh kicked to Todd on the West's 3-yard line.

Mail Carrier Shoots Perfect 100 In Preliminary to Grand Event

By the Associated Press

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 22.—Despite that old adage, Roy W. Miller, of Grove City, Minn., wishes he could have put off until tomorrow what he did today.

The 48-year-old rural mail carrier cracked 100 targets in a row from the 20-yard line to win the preliminary handicap and $500 first prize at the forty-first annual Grand American Trap Shoot.

If he could have postponed the stunt until tomorrow, the Grand American Handicap, greatest event on the scattergun calendar, and a prize of at least $1,000 probably would be his. Both are run on exactly the same plan, and under the same conditions.

Miller's perfect score, the first he ever registered at handicaps, was the second "century" recorded in the 41 years of the preliminary. Jean Pope, of East Moline, Ill., had the other in 1930. In 40 years, only one man has won both the preliminary and the "Grand." That happened back in 1905, when R. R. Barber, of Paullina, Iowa, turned the trick.

Shooting in a field of 749, Miller nosed out Bill Drennan, of Utica, Ill., by a single target.

E. L. Hawkins, recreation center operator of Fort Wayne, Inc., snared the national doubles title with 98 of 100.

St. Louis Legion Defeats Sumter, 5-2

Rock Hill, S. C., Aug. 22 (AP).—St. Louis defeated Sumter, 5 to 2, here today in the fourth game of the southeastern sectional tournament of the American Legion junior baseball elimination series.

A team has to be beaten twice to be eliminated from the tournament, and Sumter will play Little Rock, Ark., at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

St. Louis tallied two in the first on Dubrowski's single after a pair of Sumter errors; in the third on Gene McCabe's homer; in the fourth after Cohen's single, an error and a sacrifice, and in the fifth when Nauman tripled and came home on Dubrowski's third hit of the day.

Kertes Scores 'Ace' In P.G.A. Practice

Hershey, Pa., Aug. 22 (AP).—Stanley Kertes, of Santa Monica, Calif., made a hole in one on the eighteenth green today in a practice round for the P. G. A. tournament which starts here Monday.

Kertes, playing with three other California players, Harry Obitz, jr., Mare Island; Eddie Duino, San Jose, and Don Taylor, Sleepy Hollow, toured the back nine in a 4-under-par 33, a stroke shy of tieing Dick Metz's record for the last nine.

On the 190-yard eighteenth his drive with a 4-iron landed within 6 feet of the cup and rolled in.

Izzy Jannazzo, Williams Drill At Arena Today

Louis' Protege Works Out at 1 P. M., for Bout Monday Night

Principals in Monday night's 10-round match at Griffith Stadium —Holman Williams, Joe Louis' protege, and Izzy Jannazzo, of New York—will arrive today and start training at Turner's Arena.

John Roxoborough, who handles Williams for Heavyweight Joe Louis, is due in town with Larry Amadee, trainer, and Williams around 10 this morning. Williams will work out at 1 p. m.

Jannazzo and his pilot, Guy Anselmi, will reach town around noon. The New Yorker's workout is slated for 2 p. m.

There's a bit of business at the District Boxing Commission's offices for the managers of the two fighters to clear up before the boys work out. Roxborough and Anselmi are coming here, they say, armed with $1,000 forfeit checks, each, to pave the way for a future title bout. They need the backing of the National Boxing Association and the District Boxing Commission.

Promoter Turner and Matchmaker Menendez and arena staff held a conference yesterday, looked over the records of the two fighters, and studied the welterweight situation thoroughly. They came to the conclusion that this match Monday is the closest to a championship welterweight bout Washington ever has had. It brings together Jannazzo, rated No. 1 by the New York Boxing Commission, No. 4 by the National Boxing Association, and Williams, rated No. 3 by the N. B. A.

Who's Leading the Race Now?

Read The Gallup Poll In Sunday's Post—AND KNOW!

The Second State-by-State Gallup Poll Report on Election Candidates

A lot of people were surprised by the Gallup Poll on Willkie versus Roosevelt in The Washington Post several Sundays ago. Roosevelt led in popular votes, 51% to 49%, but Willkie led in electoral votes, 304 to 227, since he carried the bigger States.

Since that poll was taken a lot of things have happened, including Mr. Willkie's acceptance speech. Did he win any more voters? Has he strengthened his lead in electoral votes?

Or has the same thing happened that occurred in 1936, when Landon led in the first poll but dropped behind fast from then on?

To know what's happened politically, be sure to read The Washington Post this Sunday. It carries the second Gallup Poll on Roosevelt and Willkie, and will again bring you the vote by individual States.

Number Two Post Position Proves Right One at Marlboro

Five Winners Spring From Second Spot

Schley Al Takes Opener; Double Pays $32.30; Eltonhead Wins

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 22.—Deuces were wild here today. Those in the crowd of 7,000 who took the hunch that this was the twenty-second day of the month and the second day of the meeting, collected a bunch when five horses came out of No. 2 stall gate to win races on the seven-event program. The two deuces accounted for the daily double, the first four races and then came through again in the sixth race.

Schley Al, owned by R. A. Bowman, jr., started the parade of No. 2 horses by winning the first race in a driving finish with B. A. Hall's Blenethal. Arrow Girl was third in this test over the sprint course of 6½ furlongs. Schley Al paid $5.80 and paved the way for a $32.30 daily double.

Golden Mayne, performing in the colors of the Flamingo Farm, came out of the second gate to put the finishing touches on the "2 and 2" combination in the twin wager. Under good riding by G. Rose, the gelding drove home in front of Kenner and Justa Jimmie. The winner paid $13.20.

Two-year-olds held the attention in the third race and again the one carrying the No. 2 saddle cloth was the winner. The Green Gables Farm's Erin's Girl, a $6.80 shot, came up to defeat a tiring good thing named All Gray. Don Barr was third in this sprint.

The parade of two's went right into the day's feature event. Eight starters lined up for the test of five and a half furlongs, the Willard Hotel Purse, and Fred Brown's Eltonhead proved the best of the lot. The same Jockey Rose took the son of Flag Day to the top as soon as the gates opened and he stayed there throughout. Hiblaze caused some trouble early and Way Out challenged late but Eltonhead held an advantage at the end of a half length. Way Out was second and Brainchild was third in the thriller. Eltonhead paid $13.60 and won his fourth purse of the year.

There was a moratorium on the No. 2 horses in the fifth race while Yankee Lad, owned by Galt Davis, of Washington and Rosslyn bowling fame, won the fifth race over the mile and a sixteenth route. Sammy Palumbo rode one of his better races and brought the American Flag gelding from behind to down Real Money and Two Aces.

But the deuce popped up again in the sixth race and Palumbo had his second winner of the day. The Brooklyn boy had the mount on Petee Lad and drove him up in the final stages to lead Brazen Hussy and Playdema to the wire. Petee Lad paid $6.60.

KENNER came wide for racing room entering backstretch and came with good energy at close. JUSTA JIMMIE set early pace and responded to punishment to come again in closing stages. Selections at Marlboro

Dear Al,

Happy Gordon, the outrider, ponied Chief Evergreen before yesterday's sixth race. Just like Peg Hanna trying to put on some airs. An old favorite of Washington fans, Irish Vote has seen the race track for the last time. Owner Al Nader has given the veteran to Paul Marriott for a saddle horse. If you have been wondering about the absence of Jockey Carson Kirk, he has gone to Wheeling. His brother, Woodrow, will ride out the meeting here. By the way, Trainer Hanna has taken over Itsie Bitsie and Jacamar to train for J. Cugliotta. A. C. Paul's Whatodo, a galloping winner at Bel Air, has been named for the Walden at Pimlico. Trainer W. J. Hughes wants to sell or trade Nanci's Best and Princess Lady. They may be seen at Barn A. They might make good brood mares. C. O. Ferguson has been named trainer for E. K. Hillman's Bellthorn. There is a mistaken idea that the boys in the press box get all the good things. Take an eight-horse race: Galt Davis comes up and says he gives his horse a good chance. Trainer George Cook comes around and says his horse is a cinch. The boy who rubs the No. 3 horse says he blew out in fine style. Palumbo says he likes his horse. Kelly says that the thing he rides will go good. Pop Goss says his horse should be right there. The clocker arrives and says the No. 1 horse has outworked anything on the grounds. The telegraph operators have a hot tip on No. 4. And so we are right back where we were when the entries came out. Jockey Joe O'Malley has been listed on the program as the rider of two horses and both have won after he canceled the mounts. Henry Horkheimer, prominent stockholder in the Wheeling track, was a visitor. He has horses trained by J. Bowes Bond. The track has a new sprinkling truck, a streamliner that really does a fine job. But I can't go for that one about making the track muddy opening day for Darby Du. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Kittiwake appears best suited of the maidens gathered for the first event. Needs only to run back to that Bel Air race. Dark Pony should like the slow track and the cheap company. In The Red ran good here last year and may cause an upset in this sprint.

Second race—Sun Sweep could be the right one in this rather open affair. Always liked soft ovals and has been coming to best form gradually. The Dulaney Entry of Pushkin and Anya should be in the thick of contention. Blind Talk for the minor award.

Third race—Misty Eye is the class of the day's juvenile dash but is a doubtful starter. Glitter Girl has plenty of speed and is the best of those assured places at the starting gate. Misprint showed a fine effort and might take it all.

Fourth race—Gennaro has too much on the ball for this gang. Needs only the right ride. Sistaur has plenty of foot and is a dangerous contender. Royal Dot belongs with these.

Fifth race—Worthowning closed like the wind in that race at Cumberland and has a fighting chance to get home in this company. I'm going to string along. Squabble has met and downed better and is fit. Artist should go well.

Sixth race—First Fling turned back fair ones at the other town and fits nicely in this field. Likes the route and the weight is about right. Blox and Regal Frolic to take care of the place and show awards.

Seventh race—The Cappo-Bennings Entry of Maetake and Clymene should be prominent in this field. I'm going to be there. America First is as good as those recent fine efforts. Bubbleworth will like the soft track and should surprise.

Best bet—First Fling.

Outsider Rodin Captures Spa Feature Race

Favorite Volitant Fades And Finishes Out of Money Before 9,626

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Joseph Wormser's Rodin, outsider of the four-horse field, scored his third victory in four Spa outings when he drove to a neck decision over Mrs. E. Graham Lewis' Jacomar in the Hessian Handicap before a crowd of 9,626 here today.

George D. Widener's filly, Rosetown, finished three lengths behind the pair while earning the show. Volitant, from the Saratoga stable of George H. Bull and John A. Morris, and favorite at odds of 95 cents on the dollar, trailed ten lengths behind under his 122 pounds. The victor ran the 1 mile in 1:37 2-5 and paid $10.30.

Volitant recently defeated Masked General in a mile race. He carried only 113 pounds on that occasion and was timed in 1:37. The display gelding was well placed in today's early running but faded badly.

Rosetown dased into a lead of several lengths, with Volitant and Jacomar nearest in pursuit while Irving Anderson was biding his time astride Rodin. Jacomar collared Rosetown around the bend as Volitant hoisted the distress signal and the sharp Rodin began moving up. When the last furlong was reached, Jacomar, Rosetown and Rodin were heads apart. Rosetown was first to crack, but the other two fought it out stubbornly, with Rodin having more left for the closing strides.

Toast of the Sandlots . . .

By Bill Burnett

If you speak of Frederick or Lewis Thomas to a follower of Washington sports you get a blank stare. But if you mention "Little Knocky" or just plain "Knocky" Thomas you're liable to have a long conversation on your hands.

The "Knocky" Thomas now doing business in an athletic way locally is the younger of the brothers whose football, basketball and baseball feats at Tech and Maryland University will be remembered for a long time. Frederick, or "Little Knocky," picked up his nickname from his brother, had it shortened to the original. Where it came from in the first place nobody knows.

Baseball and basketball have received the special attention of young Thomas. He was good enough as a catcher, as a matter of fact, to get a contract with the Nats. They shipped him off to their Salisbury farm during 1938 and 1939.

This year, however, he decided to stay at home, take a job with the Washington Gas Light Co. He plays with the team of his employers in the United States Government League as well as with Miller Furniture, of the Sunday National City League. When Miller meets J. C. Flood nine Sunday for the second-half title, "Knocky" will be one good reason for favoring the Furniture club.

Bright Beam Is 3-Length Victor at Salem

3-2 Favorite Leads All Way of 6 Furlong Sprint of Feature

By the Associated Press

Salem, N. H., Aug. 22.—Ray Metcalf's Bright Beam, 3-to-2 favorite in the betting, galloped far in front all the way over the 6-furlong course to score an easy win in the featured fourth race on today's all-claiming card at Rockingham Park.

The 4-year-old gelding broke in front of the nine-horse field and increased his lead to four lengths going down the backstretch. W. W. Adams' Sun Antioch and Mrs. Fishburn's Savitar tried to run with him but didn't come close.

Bright Beam romped to the wire three lengths ahead of Savitar in 1:12, while Sun Antioch finished third. The winner paid $5.20, $3, and $2.40, Savitar returned $4.60 and $3, and Sun Antioch paid $3.80.

Sanford to Join Nats Tomorrow

"I'm impatient to see what he can do with big league pitching," said Harris. "This is the ideal time of year to bring up hitters from the minors. If they can hit big league pitching late in the season, they are good hitters. The shadows that fall across the infield from the stands are long and are in favor of the pitching.

"It's a poor season of year to try out rookie pitchers who get the benefit of the shadows. I've seen too many cases of pitchers splurging in the fall and folding the next spring. But if the hitter can hit in the fall, he's a good hitter."

The Nats had an unadvertised off-day yesterday. Four minutes before game time, a thundershower washed out the scheduled affair with the White Sox and washed a doubleheader onto the schedule for Saturday.

The slim gathering of fans who braved the threatening weather were awaiting the start of the game when the fierce shower descended. The ground crew had no time to cover the field, and ten minutes later the umpires walked out on the diamond to investigate the condition of the field.

Umpire in Chief Lou Kolls dug his toe timidly into the mud of the baselines and shook his head in the negative. Umpire Bill McGowan joined him and he also despaired, perhaps in the knowledge that they would be doing the front office a favor by calling off the game, which they did.

Ken Chase, who was warmed up yesterday before the rain fell, will go back to the mound today. Jack Knott will be the pitcher for the White Sox. It is a Ladies Day affair.

The double-header tomorrow will witness the restoration of Joe Krakauskas to the role of starting pitcher. He will share the twin bill pitching with Walter Masterson.

Waugh Pop Wins Hinsdale Purse

Chicago, Aug. 22 (AP).—M. E. Zee's Waugh Pop won the Hinsdale Purse before 8,000 chilly customers at Washington Park today to give Jockey Bill Thompson his third winner of the day.

Leading almost from the start in the mile and a furlong affair, Waugh Pop carried his light weight of 103 pounds to a length and a half triumph over Holl Image. Third place went to Jack Greenock. The favored Warfellow never threatened.

Waugh Pop's win price was $10.80 and the time over a good track was 1:53 2-5. Earlier, Thompson had scored with Lucky Major at $15.80 in the first race and aboard the odds-on favorite, My Luck, in the third.

Norfolk Wins, 2 to 1

Asheville, N. C., Aug. 22 (AP).—In a sizzling mound battle here tonight Norfolk's Wild Bill Gill shaded Asheville's Clarence Beers and netted a 2-1 victory in the third game of the series. Each club obtained only three safeties, with Asheville's trio of clouts being for extra bases.

Bank Reserves Up 30 Millions During Week

Gold Stock Increases $111,000,000, Federal Board Reports

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said last night lendable excess reserves of banks increased $30,000,000 to a total of $6,420,000,000 in the week ended August 21. As in preceding weeks, the gain was due to gold imports.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended August 21 member bank reserve balances increased $79,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from a decrease of $51,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and increases of $111,000,000 in gold stock and $3,000,000 in Treasury currency, offset in part by increases of $32,000,000 in money in circulation, $10,000,000 in Treasury cash, and $41,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and a decrease of $3,000,000 in Reserve Bank credit. Excess reserves of member banks on August 21 were estimated to be approximately $6,420,000,000, an increase of $30,000,000 for the week."

Rains Aid Crops In Central Valley

By the Associated Press

Rains in the last week benefited late crops in the Central Valley, the Weather Bureau reported yesterday, but added that prolonged drought in the Western great plains was becoming acute.

Ranges on the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains were extremely dry. Irrigation water in some sections was short. Forest fires in Wyoming were reported to be the worst in the State's history.

In many sections eastward from eastern Kansas and Nebraska the bureau said rains were sufficient to improve the moisture situation.

Heavy to excessive rains caused much flooding in the Piedmont sections of the Carolinas and Virginia, destroying many lowland crops and damaging others.

The Federal Diary:

Federal Rents Up $500,000 Since May 1

Officials Still Seek More Working Space For Defense Employes

By Edward Ryan

The Government's rent bill in Washington was boosted $500,000 during the summer as officials sought more working room for the expanding army or defense employes, C. J. Guthridge, space control chief, reported yesterday.

Between May 1 and August 15 the annual rental charge for Government office space leased from private building owners in the District jumped from $3,866,494.63 to $4,393,332, the report said.

Since the defense program started the space controllers have been probing every extra corner of their Government-owned and rented offices to find room for more desks.

During the May to August period Government-owned space in Washington was cut down, with removal of the old machine shops opposite the Labor Department at Fourteenth and Constitution avenue northwest. Rented space, meanwhile, has increased by 400,000 square feet, from 4,303,245 square feet on May 1, to 4,730,921 square feet August 15. Total of all Government offices and storage rooms in Washington is more than 21,000,000 square feet, Guthridge said.

Carroll L. Wilson, former investment researcher, yesterday was nominated by President Roosevelt to be assistant director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Wilson has been in the Commerce Department for a year, as special assistant to Secretary Hopkins, and recently as chief of the industrial divisions in the bureau. He succeeds Nathaniel Engle, who resigned several days ago.

Wilson is a Harvard graduate and former research director for Scudder, Stevens & Clark, New York investment counselors. Engle is expected either to take on a special assignment for the bureau or transfer to another Government job that has been offered to him.

Too many organizations meeting at too many dinners to hear too many brass hats have spurred a handful of key Government officials into setting up a new organization.

It will be the Washington Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration, and its organizers are expecting to have a program and a charter early next month.

Chairman Corson, of the organizing committee, said that both the charter and the program are being drafted to "make the society a vigorous organization of wide participation."

Its founders believe there are already too many organizations which meet at periodic dinners to listen to brass hats," said Corson.

The program will bring men from different technical fields together for professional study of their problems, he said. It will not invade the fields of specialized societies but act as a clearing house between them.

Corson is director of the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance in the Social Security Board. Other antibrass-hat founders include Daniel Bell, Undersecretary of the Treasury; Donald Stone, Bureau of the Budget; Henry Seidemann, Brookings Institution; Catherine Seckler-Hudson, American University; John Hader, Social Security Board; Oliver Short, Commerce Department; Frank Hanrahan, Manager of Arlington County; Henry Reining, jr., National Institute of Public Affairs; Roy Hendrickson, Agriculture Department.

Barriers set up by Congress against employing aliens in the Government service are going to be enforced to the letter, according to a ruling of Acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott.

His ruling barred salary payments for an Interior Department employe, Villy M. Hansen, a subforeman employed on the Boulder Dam project.

Secretary Ickes told Elliott that Hansen had filed declaration to become a citizen in 1920, that he had served in the United States Army, and believed these two actions had given him citizenship.

Elliott said, however, that Hansen's declaration of intention to become a citizen was good only for seven years, and held that the current Interior appropriation act barred him from his Government job.

Calendar: The Federal Playhouse Orchestra will hold its first rehearsal along with auditions for new members, tonight in the Interior Department Auditorium . . . Officers and members of the District department, American Federation of Government Employes will sail on the S. S. Potomac at 9 a. m. Sunday for an all-day cruise to Colonial Beach.

U. S. Mails Again Routed Through Bermudan Censor

The British blockade against German or Italian business transactions with this country appeared last night to be materially strengthened because American mails are again being routed through Bermuda, scene of a tight British censorship.

Moreover, it was said authoritatively that the United States Government now has no objections to the Bermuda censorship, which led to a controversy some months ago and prompted Pan-American Airways to skip Bermuda on its trans-Atlantic hops.

Pan-American clippers, and vessels of the American export line, have now resumed stops at Bermuda, en route between New York and Lisbon. The British examination of most of the mail passing between Europe and the United States, informed sources said, will make it difficult for German or Italian securities, or anything which might be converted into foreign exchange, to reach this country.

It will also render it difficult, it was added, for German or Italian news pictures or propaganda to arrive in the United States.

One advantage cited for the calling of liners there was that it avoided the risk of having the ships taken by British naval vessels into the European combat zone to a point such as Gibraltar.

U. S. Wages Fifth-Column War In Japanese-Infested Hawaii

G-Men Staff Increased From 3 To More Than 20, Army and Navy Intelligence Personnel to About 40 Each

This is the fourth in a series of articles on America's national defense outposts in the Pacific, the results of a 30,000-mile flying survey of the entire Pacific defense area via Pan American Airways' Clipper planes.

Honolulu, Aug. 22.—The United States Government has inaugurated a secret blitzkrieg on any potential Fifth Column in Hawaii, spearhead of American defense in the Pacific.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation—the G-men—has increased its personnel here from three to more than 20 and the Army and Navy Intelligence Services have boosted their staffs to about 40 each—all because of Fifth Column activities.

Of the total population of the Hawaiian Islands of 411,485, there are approximately 83,000 residents born in Japan and another estimated 90,000 born here of Japanese parents.

Thousands of Japanese who have never become naturalized and Hawaiian-born children who are United States citizens by birth, have proven themselves loyal citizens of the New World. But in the great number of residents of foreign birth there has been a small number which has caused concern in official quarters.

To date there have been no spectacular arrests of potential Fifth Columnists, no imprisonments or even serious charges.

But the anti-Fifth Column work has been going on quietly for weeks now, without any sensationalism. Every time a merchant or passenger ship leaves Honolulu for the Orient, it carries several people who have not bought tickets.

The reason for this is that there are a great many military secrets in connection with building the present defense skeleton of America's principal Pacific defense post into a real fortress of the sea.

For instance, the combined Army-Navy Air Force have buried in the ground more than 1,200,000 gallons of high-test gasoline. Also somewhere in the region of Salt Lake Crater, the Army has buried enough ammunition to outlast any conceivable siege of these islands.

And the Navy has sunk in the ground aviation bombs ranging from little hundred pounders to big 1,100-pound bombs strong enough to shake a battleship apart or blast an aircraft tender to bits with all its winged cargo.

Because of these secret operations the government has decided that only citizens, who not only swear allegiance to the United States but really mean it, are proper people to have in islands which stand between America and possible aggression from across the Pacific.

Canada's New National Registry Traps Escaped War Prisoner

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 22.—National registration was completed in Canada yesterday and resulted in the arrest of Guenther Lorentz, a German officer, who escaped Monday from a northern Ontario internment camp.

Lorentz was picked up at Montreal at dusk last night, when he hesitated in crossing a bridge across the St. Lawrence guarded by military authorities. He did not know about the registration and his lack of a card led to his identification. His capture was not announced until today.

Kind-hearted Canadians—a whole lot of them—did their best unwittingly to help Lorentz escape.

A youth in a town of Toronto showed him how to thumb a ride. Lorentz had never heard of hitchhiking before. A gasoline station gave him a map. Free maps were something entirely new in his experience. Motorists gave him free rides to Toronto and on to Montreal they fed him. They gave him tobacco. One even loaned him $2.

Lorentz feet were badly blistered, showing that he had done some walking between Toronto and Montreal. He was wearing the civilian suit he brought to Canada with him and his own name and German address on the label of the suit identified him. After this was discovered he gave up trying to argue with the officers.

Goering's Magazine On 'Potato' Paper

Berlin, Aug. 22 (AP).—Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's fortnightly magazine, Vier Jahresplan (four-year plan), appears currently on paper made from potato vines. Germans hail the development as a noteworthy industrial achievement and predict potato-vine cellulose soon will be used for manufacture of yarns and a great variety of fabrics.

War Risk Shipping Insurance Increased

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—War risk shipping insurance rates, increased Monday to 20 per cent of valuation in certain sea areas, still are lower on the whole than those during the World War, London insurance circles said today.

Even in Germany's submarine campaign of 1917 rates never rose above 20 per cent, one informant said, adding that the present rates generally are lower than in 1914-18 "because Germany has no navy to speak of and her attempts to blockade Britain by bombs have failed."

Britain's Arms Output Increasing

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—Herbert Morrison, minister of supply, said in a broadcast tonight that the war effort speedup has given Britain "an arms industry greater in its output and far greater in its future productive capacity than anyone would have dared to think possible three months ago."

Britain, however, is still behind Germany in arms making, he observed.

Britain Turning Out Mass Production Planes

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—Britain now is using mass production methods in turning out training planes.

A track assembly line introduced in a British aircraft factory, it was disclosed today, is being used for final stages of construction of the fast Miles-Master single-motored training plane.

Jane's All the World's Aircraft says the two-seater Miles-Master monoplane has a cruising speed of 215 miles an hour, with top speed of 250 m. p. h.

House Unit Favors Admitting 270 More to Naval Academy

The House Naval Committee approved legislation yesterday which would permit an additional 270 youths to enter the U. S. Naval Academy, at Annapolis, as midshipmen this year.

The measure would admit to the academy those men who were found physically and mentally qualified in the 1939 and 1940 examinations but who were not accepted because of a lack of vacancies. The authorization would be limited, however, to those who had not reached their twentieth birthdays on April 4, 1940.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, appointed a subcommittee headed by Representative Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, to study the question of raising the admission age for the academy from 20 to 21 years.

Sergt. Alvin C. York Favors Conscription

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Aug. 22 (AP).—Sergt. Alvin C. York, conscientious objector in the World War who was drafted and became a hero for the single-handed capture of 132 German officers and men, favors conscription.

York, en route to Los Angeles for the national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said conscription would "remove the morass of disgrace" which separated volunteers and drafted men.

Schools to Train Armored Corps Troops

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, said yesterday that the War Department had arranged with half a dozen civilian schools to train specialists for the Army's armored corps.

Navy Plans to Build 30 Destroyers

Navy plans to build 30 destroyers at San Francisco were made known yesterday by Representative Welch (Republican), California, who said that an actual start on the program hinged on acquisition of a 32-acre tract adjacent to the Union Iron Works plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co.

Welch said the destroyers would cost about $9,000,000 each, or a total of $270,000,000.

W. L. Batt Named New Defense Aide

The National Defense Advisory Commission announced yesterday appointment of William L. Batt, Philadelphia industrial engineer, as deputy commissioner of the industrial materials division.

Batt is president of the S. K. F. Industries.

Television Flying Torpedo Reported

Los Angeles, Aug. 22 (AP).—Development of an aerial torpedo which scans movements and flashes them on a screen at military headquarters miles away was reported today.

President George H. Seward, of the Television Engineers' Institute, made the disclosure at the organization's first national convention. He said the torpedo had been developed by U. A. Sanabria, Chicago television pioneer, but gave no details.

Galloway to Mark 57 Years With B. & O.

Baltimore, Aug. 22 (AP).—Charles W. Galloway, vice president in charge of maintenance and operations for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, will mark an anniversary tomorrow—the completion of 57 years' service with the railroad.

Starting as a messenger boy in 1883, the veteran official has worked at most of the important points on the 6,000-mile system. His grandfather, William Galloway, was one of the B. & O.'s earliest engineers, operating an old horse car between Baltimore and Ellicott Mills.

D. C. Health Camp Holds Open House

Open house will be held at the District Tuberculosis Association's Health Camp at Bald Eagle Hill, D. C., Sunday, as the 94 young campers enter their final week of supervised rest, feeding and play.

Dr. James G. Townsend, former president of the association, will address the parents and visitors. On Monday the Metropolitan Police Boys Club will entertain the youngsters, with the United States Marine Band giving a musical program the following day. Final dinner will be held Thursday when special awards will be made.

Sen. Gillette Opening Home To Refugees

7 Families Complete Arrangements to Care For Children Here

Senator and Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa, are one of the seven Washington couples who have completed steps to open their homes to British refugee children through the agency of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children.

The announcement was made yesterday by Miss Anne T. Swindell at a meeting of the Washington branch of the organization held at the Council of Social Agencies.

The seven families have fulfilled financial and affadivit requirements to care for 12 unspecified children, according to Miss Swindell. Return of affadavits from six other families is awaited to bring to 18 the total number of unspecified British children who can be cared for in Washington homes, said Miss Swindell.

Gillettes Will Take Two

Senator and Mrs. Gillette have one son, Mark, 11. They told the Washington committee they wish to take either two boys or a boy and a girl.

While 91 District families have made requests for unspecified children from Great Britain, only a few have completed the necessary requirements, Miss Swindell stated. She urged all persons planning to take children to "complete the necessary steps as quickly as possible."

Mrs. Stuart Rice, chairman of the information committee of the Washington branch, told the group yesterday that the national committee has guaranteed homes for 1,000 children fleeing the war zone, although homes have been arranged for only about 500 thus far. Mrs. Rice reported on a meeting of the national committee she attended in New York earlier in the week.

D. C. Schools to Pass Over Fees

"The national committee stresses the fact that it is quicker for persons wishing to get children out of Britain to work through the United States committee than through American consuls abroad," she said.

"Because of transportation difficulties" the committee is discouraging schools taking large units of children, she asserted.

It was announced that public schools in nearby Maryland and Virginia as well as the District schools will be opened to refugee children without payment of special fees.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, chief of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department and vice chairman of the Washington committee, presided at the meeting here.

Women in Veils Begin Draft Bill 'Death Watch'

By the Associated Press

Wearing black mourning veils, a group of women opposed to compulsory military training began yesterday what they termed a "death watch on the Burke-Wadsworth Bill" in the reception room just outside the Senate chamber.

Mrs. Rosa Farber, of Detroit, said the demonstration would continue until the Senate defeats the conscription legislation or until the November elections, in case Congress passes the bill.

Nine women, most of them middle-aged and gray-haired, sat solemnly at one end of the ornate reception room usually reserved for persons having appointments with Senators. The women's group hanged an effigy of Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, advocate of unlimited aid to Great Britain, on the Capitol grounds yesterday.

Pound Not 'Doggy' Enough; Marks Asks More Funds

Three additional dogcatchers and $1,500 to improve the pound are requested by Frank B. Marks, poundmaster, in his new budget of $16,786, an increase of $4,806 over the current sum.

Two of the men will operate the new truck to be purchased with funds included in the 1941 appropriation. The third man is needed to watch the pound between the hours of 4 and 11 p. m. At present time no one is on duty during these hours to handle calls. Four hundred dollars Marks requests be added to his personal salary for "partial restorement of his salary." His present salary is $2,200.

The Public Utilities Commission submitted its 1942 budget estimates totalling $76,300 an increase of $4,880 over present appropriations, providing for the addition of an engineer at $3,800.

Senate Gets Bill For Underpass

Chairman King of the Senate District Committee yesterday introduced a bill authorizing the Pennsylvania Railroad to construct an underpass across New York avenue, near Fourth street northeast.

The legislation, requested by the railway, is intended to permit the Pennsylvania to extend its tracks into the commercial area adjacent to New York avenue.

The construction will involve no expense for either the District or Federal government, and plans for the underpass will be approved by the District.

Educate Public To Fascist Tricks, Studebaker Urges

United States Commissioner of Education John W. Studebaker yesterday urged the inclusion in a curricula of schools throughout the country of courses that will "make Americans, young and old, alert to . . . the tactics of the aggressors."

In letters to chief school officers of 48 States possessions and territories, Studebaker recommended schools "vigorously educate the foreign born and foreign language groups . . . in the history and principles of American democracy."

The commissioner also urged the elimination of "civil illiteracy," which he said is "an open invitation to a Fifth Column of American propaganda."

2 College Heads Quit Roosevelt, Back Willkie

Dr. Fox and Dr. Cowley Say Republican Offers Better Program to U. S.

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Schenectady, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Dr. Dixon Ryan Fox, president of Union College, joined with William H. Cowley, president of Hamilton College, tonight in giving "enthusiastic support" to the Presidential candidacy of Wendell L. Willkie. Both voted for Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 and again in 1936.

In an open letter to Willkie, the two college presidents explained in detail why they were switching their support from President Roosevelt to the Republican candidate.

"In 1932, we believed that the leadership represented by Roosevelt would carry through a number of necessary measures of social justice more smoothly than could that represented by Mr. Hoover, despite the latter's well marked concern for such developments," the letter said in part.

"In 1936, when the Administration had accomplished as much modification of the spirit and practice of our economic life as the Nation could wisely attempt to digest, we expected that, if continued, it would direct its efforts toward the abatement of the frictions which a rapid succession of wide-sweeping reforms had inevitably generated.

"This did not, however, turn out to be the temper of the Roosevelt Administration after the election of 1936. . . . Emphasizing the admitted iniquities of a small number of business men, the Administration allowed itself to underrate and even to sneer at the contributions of business enterprise to our national welfare. It seemed to regard business as an object of continuous discipline rather than an object of constructive encouragement.

"The reconciliation of private initiative with social justice," the letter continued, "is obviously not possible under the implication that any and all business success is in itself odious. . . .

"In particular we are gratified over your support of wise regulation of our free enterprise system, of collective bargaining, and of Federal assistance to the underprivileged. . . .

"Similarly we indorse your position on taxation. We feel that the piling of mass on mass in our National debt will make a weight of debt that we can never pay. This apprehension will eventually, in one form or another, lead to repudiation. Repudiation would surely bring intense and widespread suffering and, as has been shown in other countries, might bring a devastating revolution.

"Even if Mr. Roosevelt were exactly fulfilling our faith in 1932 and 1936 in every way, we would not favor selecting him for a third term. It is one of the implications of democracy that it need not indefinitely depend upon any one man. We do not believe in the 'trust papa' theory of government. That theory has captured the imagination of the world, and, we think, to its detriment."

Progressive Play Day In Prince Georges

A Progressive Play Day directed by County Recreational Supervisor Henry Harris will be held today for the colored youngsters of Prince Georges County at Chapel Hill.

The program will get under way at 10:30 a. m. with a flag-raising by the 300 who are expected to attend. Fried chicken is the menu for the picnic lunch which will be served to those taking part.

Bladensburg Mail

Beginning tonight there will be a late collection of mail at 9:45 p. m. in Bladensburg daily except Sunday and holidays, according to announcement by Postmaster C. Howard Brown. On Sundays there will be a collection at 9:15 a. m.

Contract Bridge

The best bidder is the one who gives the most information in the fewest number of bids at the time when it is most needed. There are other times when partner needs no information and to offer it merely aids the opponents in their defense.

But far more players offer too little information than too much. Take the case of G. R. R. in this hand.

"We went down at three no trump, but four hearts would have been easy," he says. "Was my bidding wrong?"

Here are his cards, sitting South:

♠AK93
♡1076
◇QJ5
♣AJ9

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 NT.	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

G. R. R. told same story twice, and it was once too often. Having bid two no trump the second round, he should not bid it the third. A preference of his partner's suits is clearly indicated; three hearts is the bid. He should give North credit for enough intelligence to go back to three no trump if his hand warrants it. But in view of his previous bidding, it is more likely he will bid, if anything, four hearts.

IN MEMORIAM

ESSEX, MARGARET L. Sacred to the memory of our beloved mother, MARGARET L. ESSEX, who passed away one year ago today, August 22, 1939.

We never thought when you left home
You never would return.
The shock was hard, the pain severe—
We never thought your death so near.
We do not know the pain you bore
Even though we saw you die;
We only know you went away
And did not say goodby.

Devoted Children.

Today's Radio Highlights

10:45 a. m., WOL—Johnny, Get Your Gun: To the music of the United States Army Band at the World's Fair in New York, the Mutual network airs statistics and information about recruiting.

7:30 p. m., WJSV—Those who say they know declare that while males are superior when mere muscle and speed are involved, when brains count in sports, it's the women athletes who have the edge. This theory is tested to a shadowy extent on Choose Up Sides, when Tennis Star Alice Marble comes up against Eddie Collins, now general manager of the Boston Red Sox after an active career!

8:30, WOL—When he was a lad he served a turn as an admirer of the late great saxaphonist, Rudy Weidoeft. In fact, when he took to a professional career after his collegiate success at Yale, Hubert Pryor Vallee changed his first name to Rudy. Tonight on Command Performance he plays a dramatization based on material furnished by Weidoeft's widow.

9, WJSV—Out-spoken, Gen. Hugh Johnson speaks in favor of military conscription. It was the general, by the way, who drafted the conscription bill in the World War and supervised its execution.

9:30, WRC—Gerard Darrow, 8; Cynthia Cline, 14, and Van Dyke Tiers, 13, are still on Quiz Kids, all other comers against them having failed in the first meeting. Tonight's new-attempters-of-the-seeming-impossible are Jack Beckman, 13, who has an "A" average for eight years of Chicago schooling, and Davida M. Wolffson, also 13.

10:15, WOL—Blonde Norwegian Skater Sonja Henie registers with Uncle Sam as an alien. The new Mrs. Dan Topping has taken out her first citizenship papers but is subject to the alien registration law. She illustrates over the air how the procedure works. Earl Harrison, national director of Alien Registration, speaks.

Just a few words—not particularly winged—about WJSV's "Magic Carpet."—

That's the program you hear every weekday over the station at 8:15 a. m. But, frankly, you should know that its perpetrators don't necessarily get up that early. They usually conduct their interviews the previous evening and have along some nice, amenable engineers to take it all down on records.

There's a good reason for that, I hasten to add. The interviewers make it a point to be present at some more or less happy gathering and to put the participants through a lively quiz, all in the spirit of good, clean fun. And the theory is that it's pretty hard to find a lively gathering, complete with fun, at 8:15 in the morning.

Bob Baker, who arranges the shows for WJSV, is on the lookout for new ideas on where and with whom to do the broadcasts. So, if you have any, you might write or telephone him. It's a good chance to hear yourself and your friends on the radio—more fun!

"Magic Carpet" is sponsored by a baking concern and loaves of bread are handed out willy-nilly to the contestants. We think the impromptu remark made by Interviewer Gunnar Back as he handed a loaf to one of the contestants the other night is worth repeating. Said Gunnar: "I'm happy to present you with this loaf of such and such bread, and I certainly hope you'll be able to use it for many years to come."

D. C. Troops Start Home From Games

Maneuvers End, Units Must Disband Here By Saturday Midnight

Cortland, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Advance units of the 260th Coast Artillery, District National Guard, homeward bound from maneuvers, began rolling into that place early tonight and setting up the 11 heavy guns and their 12-ton prime movers on a grassy pasture along the Tioughnioga River. The men then will crawl into their shelter tents or into trucks for the first real sleep they've had since Tuesday.

Tomorrow they will set out in convoy again for Northumberland, Pa., where they will bivouac tomorrow night in the same wheatfield they used three weeks ago. Sometime Saturday afternoon, the regiment will reach Washington and begin unloading their equipment, a job which must be finished before midnight

When the mimic war along the Racquette River, east of Ogdensburg, ended abruptly yesterday at 1 p. m., the regiment was in position around the railhead at Heuvelton, 10 of its guns concealed in emplacements, its machine guns scattered over the surrounding cow pastures, outposts lying far distant from the guns and from the regimental command post. Still farther away was the base camp at Richville, where its tents and kitchens still stood and where all of its equipment not needed in the field was stored.

Guns Speedily Loaded

By 4 p. m. the guns were out and on their way back. By 7:30 a stream of trucks roared from the base camp to the Richville railhead, loading eight freight cars with the regiment's goods.

The regiment's quick departure is part of the unwritten story of America's most ambitious peacetime maneuvers.

When Wednesday dawned, Col. Walter W. Burns, regimental commander, and his officers were harassed by a situation which appeared to have no solution. They were torn by conflicting orders from higher authority and were faced with the unpalatable task of deciding which to obey.

First Army had ordered the 260th to keep its guns in position until 1 p. m. today, when it expected the war to end. The National Guard Bureau had ordered the regiment to be in Washington with its men out of service by midnight Saturday.

Had it complied with both orders, it would have pulled out of its advanced positions at 1 p. m. tomorrow and, by almost inhuman exertions, might have been ready for its first elements to leave Richville by 10 p. m. The fast trucks and the station wagons, by continuous driving, by stopping only for fuel, might have reached Washington by 10 p. m. Saturday.

U. S. Pay Ends Then

The prime movers, which can average only 15 miles an hour over hilly country, could not possibly have reached Washington before mid-morning Sunday and then only by incredible luck and superhuman exertion. The result would have been that the regiment, its men exhausted, could not have made the trip and unloaded its equipment by the time limit set.

Even so, it would have passed automatically out of Federal service at midnight Saturday. The pay of its officers and men would have stopped then; there would have been no more rations unless the men fed themselves or their officers fed them out of their own pockets; any man injured or fallen ill after the time limit would have been cared for by the Army only at the Army's discretion.

The regiment felt that these things faced it because when it sought to leave Washington for Fort Ontario a day early, they were advanced as reasons why it must wait a day. An order for the early movement, already issued, was canceled.

Only the collapse of the Black Army at noon yesterday pulled the 260th from the horns of a dilemma. Its officers still are a little dazed by their luck.

Hero of 'Casey at Bat' Poem Mourns Death of Its Author

"MIGHTY CASEY" MISSES A FRIEND—Sad was 77-year-old Daniel M. Casey when he learned yesterday at his home in Silver Spring, Md., that Ernest L. Thayer, author of "Casey at the Bat," had died

And somewhere men are laughing,
And somewhere children shout
But there is no joy in Mudville—
Mighty Casey has struck out.

Seventy-seven-year-old Dan Casey looked off into the shadows outside his Silver Spring, Md., home yesterday and said he was never really riled by the poem.

"And I want everybody to know I wasn't," he added. He was talking to reporters who had told him of the death in Santa Barbara, Calif., of Ernest L. Thayer, the sports writer who immortalized the strike-out by Casey 43 years ago.

Dan Casey has a graphic memory of that ball game in 1897. The recollection long ago made him positive Thayer was writing about him, although the writer never admitted he had any particular ball player in mind.

Philadelphia, Casey's team, was fighting it out for the pennant lead that summer. Accordingly, there was more than usual excitement when the Giants came to town.

"I was pitching that day," the old-time ballplayer recalled. "It was 4 to 3 in the ninth inning. The bases were full and two were out when I came to bat."

Then he told of that indescribable buzz that runs through the stands at a particularly tense moment. The fans pinned their hopes on Casey, because of a home run he had smashed in Boston to win a game under similar circumstances.

According to Thayer's classic at this point:

"And when, responding to the cheers,
He lightly doffed his hat,
No stranger in the crowd could doubt
'Twas Casey at the bat."

But, "by George, try as I might, I couldn't even touch the ball. I went out one, two, three."

Dan Casey was in a melancholy mood yesterday. He couldn't remember a sadder day in 43 years, he said.

Drum Admits Vital Army Flaws, Calls for Draft to Meet Crisis

Canton, N. Y., Aug. 22 (AP).—Conceding that America's greatest war maneuvers in northern New York demonstrated "vital major weaknesses," Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, First Army commander, demanded tonight that "all citizens be called to serve with us in preparing for the threatened crisis."

Delivering his critique of the three-week war games which ended 24 hours before schedule yesterday with his "Blue" defending army subjugating out-numbered "Black" invaders, the commander maintained that the Nation is "wasting time" with discussion of the volunteer versus the conscription system.

"Let us not be blind to realities," he said. "We are too few to meet the problems ahead.

"As for the production of weapons, the volunteer system must be replaced by a national obligation system if we are to succeed."

Talking to officers representing about 90,000 troops participating in the mock battles, Drum found that national defense is "greatly improved" and that the $2,000,000 cost of the war games has been "more than justified."

At the same time, he added, the exercises have "demonstrated beyond doubt major weaknesses which require immediate solution before our preparedness plans will be really effective."

He cited, for example, weapon and equipment shortages, lack of man power and need of longer and more frequent training, as "basic preparedness weaknesses."

"In these maneuvers," he said, "we have improvised organizations as we have utilized wooden and truck substitutes for steel cannon and tanks and observation planes for dive bombers.

"To throw officers and enlisted men into directing groups and units into combat teams at the time of battle invites disaster and defeat and unnecessary sacrifice of human lives.

"War of today is far too complicated for any such system. It demands such unity and concentration of effort as can only be secured by experienced organizational teams."

Drum advised officers to "always keep in mind that man is the fundamental instrument of war" and recommended more daring tactics.

"History fails to record a successful commander who did not take calculated risks even in the face of superior numbers," he asserted. "Superior hostile numbers may be overcome through greater mobility, more accurate effective fire, better morale and better leadership."

Tax Opposition Earning Base Grows to 4-Yr.

Tentative Approval Given Formula In Ways Committee

Further delay on the Administration's plant-amortization-excess profits tax bill appeared likely yesterday as the result of growing opposition in both House and Senate to the formula tentatively approved by the House Ways and Means Committee making the period of 1936-1939, inclusive, or a four-year variation, thereof, the opinional "average earnings" base for computing excess profits.

The other method, based on invested capital, has not been subjected to criticism.

As the result of the dissension at yesterday's meeting, made apparent when it was learned the proposal might work to the disadvantage of small and new businesses, the Ways and Means Committee, after a brief session, adjourned until Saturday.

Harrison Cool to Proposal

Meanwhile, Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the group, and Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the tax subcommittee, conferred at length with John Sullivan, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Colin Stam, of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, presumably on methods of changing the formula.

It was learned that Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Finance Committee, is looking askance at the formula upon which the Ways and Means Committee was ready to give final approval. Members of the Senate committee, who postponed hearings on sugar legislation to concentrate on the excess profits tax, are unterstood to be restive under House committee delays.

"Witch Hunt" Feared

One member of the House committee predicted that the formula would be scrapped or substantially altered before the bill is reported to the House. Designed to prevent "a crop of war millionaires," the measure in its present form, some believe, would amount rather to a "witch hunt." Just how the proposal to provide an optional "average earnings" base can be written without loading the measure with "escape clauses" remains conjectural, and this procedure admittedly would only add to the complexities in any excess profits tax.

If the deadlock in the Ways and Means Committee continues, it is possible that the National Defense Advisory Commission will again recommend the plant amortization proision be separated from the excess profits tax in an effort to get speedy action on the former.

It has been pointed out that provision for amortization for plant expansion by means of tax deductions over a period of five years, as provided in the bill, is needed to accelerate the national defense efforts.

Food Blockade To Decide U.S. Crop Allotment

Wallace Defers 1941 Production Control Pending Sea War Trend

By the Associated Press

The Agriculture Department has decided to await developments in Europe's food blockade before establishing production goals for agriculture next year.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace approved the framework for 1941 crop control programs, but in the case of most major crops he left for later decision the acreage which the AAA will recommend for planting. Only the national seeding goal for wheat has been determined.

Officials emphasized that results of the British and German blockades next fall would have an important bearing on next year's acreage allotments.

Depends on Blockade

Should Great Britain maintain present bars against shipment of agricultural products to continental Europe, there would be little need, they said, of expanding American production beyond present levels. Should Germany's newly proclaimed blockade of the British Isles prove effective, it might be advisable, officials said, to ask farmers to seed less next year.

Since the war started, exports of American farm products have slumped. As a consequence, the United States has accumulated more than sufficient supplies of most food products for its own needs and the restricted foreign markets.

Should the blockades be lifted, large markets would most likely be reopened in Europe because of short crops in the war-torn countries. Such a delevolpment, officials said, might make it advisable to expand American production next year.

May Be Set Late

Thus, 1941 planting goals for cotton, corn, tobacco, and other basic crops may not be set until late in November or early December. Next year's wheat goal was set some weeks ago because the bulk of the crop is planted in the fall. Farmers were asked to plant 62,000,000 acres, or about the same that was seeded for this year's crop.

As under the 1939 and 1940 farm programs, farmers will be offered benefit payments for planting within planting allotments and for following soil-conserving and building practices recommended by the department. Congress has appropriated and authorized about $775,000,000 for such payments. Rates of payments for cooperating farmers will be set after the acreage goals are established.

Silver Spring Children Help Willkie Campaign

Establishing headquarters in a garage at 812 Live Oak drive, Woodside Forest, Md., several Silver Spring children have organized a Willkie-for-President Club.

Collections so far, according to the club president, Charles Farrington, 11, in whose garage the club meets, total $35. Tommy Russell, 14, is vice president; Joan Colladay, 11, secretary, and Margaretta Bains, 11, assistant secretary.

Chess, Checkers, Rumba Just a Snap for Champion

Newell Banks Does Them All at Once—And Blindfolded!

Checker players very generally agree that such a master as Newell Banks, of Detroit, United States checker champion for quarter of a century, is rarely known.

It's the nuances.

For example, Banks can be playing 25 or 30 games, blindfolded, and waltzing or doing a rhumba to the music of two bands—all simultaneously and never missing a step or a move. He will tell you to think nothing of it. It isn't practice; it's a natural-born gift.

He appears here tonight at 7 o'clock with the Capital City Chess Club in the Hotel Gordon. The members will have their hands full.

Example: Banks has played simultaneously 75 games of checkers, 25 games of chess, then, blindfolding himself, move into an adjoining room to play six games of checkers. The result: He won 65 games of checkers and drew 10; won 22 games of chess, drew 2 and lost 1 game; won 4 games of the blindfold checkers and drew 2. The members may know that Mr. Banks has been around.

He has traveled 1,000,000 miles in the last 37 years and wins 75 per cent to 80 per cent of all his blindfold games and about the same number when he plays games simultaneously. He had rather play blindfold than with his vision because then the light doesn't hurt his eyes.

He says he could play in rooms where circus bands are blaring, that even when playing 25 or 30 boards simultaneously the last move is always registered in his mind when a new board comes up. He says he can think of family affairs, the European war, can converse with friends or strangers while the games progress.

And, when it's all finished, he can forget checkers. "I can drop it from my mind if I like," he said yesterday.

Seven Generals Died at Front For France

Official Account Describes Heroic Conduct of Eleven

By the Associated Press

Vichy, France, Aug. 22.—The heroic conduct of 11 French generals, seven of whom were killed in the war with Germany, was set forth today in the first official account of what has become of France's high ranking officers.

It said the errors of some commanders were offset by the bravery of other generals, more of whom were killed or wounded at their posts than during the World War.

The seven who were killed or mortally wounded in action, most of them identified only by their last names, were:

Bouffet, killed May 15 by a German plane while commanding his troops.

Janssenn, who fell June 2 at the head of what remained of his division after holding up the Germans for several days before Dunkerque.

Alain d'Humieres, killed May 16 north of Vimy while inspecting the front.

Deme, who died in captivity after fighting in Belgium and north France.

The courageous conduct of Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, former governor of Metz, who held back superior German armored divisions until he was captured with the last of his soldiers, was cited.

Gen. Moulin was listed as having disappeared with part of his troops after organizing tank trap units. Gens. Corbe and Trolley de Prevaux were mentioned for fighting their way back to the French lines after being surrounded with their troops.

It was announced that Gens. Verlet-Hanus and Audet have been named to command French troops in Morocco and Tunisia respectively.
